Four Bus Lines Apply To Change Routes And Favor N. Front Street

Application Is Made For Change In Route Preparatory To Changing Terminal From Crown To North Front Street.

ANOTHER MEETING

Aldermen Will Meet Friday To Decide Whether Change Should Be Allowed.

At a special meeting of the Common Council, Monday night, four bus lines made application for a change in route preparatory to changing the uptown terminal from Crown street to North Front street.

The four lines whose applications were read by City Clerk Edgar J. Dempsey were the Eagle Bus Line, Woodstock-Kingston Bus Corporation and Pine Hill-Kingston Bus Corporation and Hudson Transit Corporation

These lines are in favor of removing to the North Front street terminal of Philip Aduchefsky.

Alderman at Large John J. Schwenk allowed the privilege of the floor to the public to discuss the uptown bus terminal question. W. D. Smith of the East Kingston road and Fred Ilert, Crown street confectioner, argued for the continuation of the old terminal and Attorney Louis Bruhn and Hyman Aduchefsky, son of his client, talked in favor of the North Front street site.

The aldermen who sat in special session to listen to the arguments were Paul Zucca, first ward; James E Connelly, 9th ward; Fred Renn, 10th ward; Eugene Cornwell, 11th ward; Walter Lukaszewski, 4th ward; James Murphy, 5th ward; Joseph Epstein, 6th ward, and Samuel Peyer, 8th ward.

Another special meeting of the council will be held Friday night at 8 o'clock for the aldermen to vote on whether the bus lines should be allowed to change their routes so that they may use the Aduchefsky terminal.

Favors Crown Street

W. D. Smith, a former salesman, residing on Route 1, Box 348½, Kingston, said, "I've lived here in Ulster county 12 years, nine of which I spent in Kingston. I patronized all of the bus lines and I don't think there could be a more convenient terminal than the Crown street one for shoppers. This terminal serves them nicely.

"Through courtesy of the former Van Wagenen store and the Sears Roebuck place people are allowed to walk through their stores from the terminal to the shopping district on Wall street. You'll inconvenience these people if you change the terminal I have interviewed at least 102 people in the vicinity of East Kingston and they are opposed to a change.

"I think the bus users are more to be considered than the merchants or bus operators."

Mr Smith then explained that shoppers are against carrying bundles from the Wall street district around to North Front street, and demonstrated that those coming to Kingston do shop a lot by picturing verbally one of the Ferraro buses Saturday night with 21 passengers and two racks full of bundles.

The speaker also said that he knew of two accidents that occurred on North Front street already involving the buses. "A teacher in No. 7 School on Crown street for 18 years told me," Smith said "that there hasn't been an accident there in that many years."

Fred Ilert said he felt certain that most of the people of whom Mr. Smith spoke as being in favor of retaining the Crown street terminal would have been at the meeting to speak for themselves if it were possible. "See, most of them are working people and can't attend a meeting like this," he said. "But, they have filed petitions, and I think this is just as good."

About the action of the Parent-Teacher Association to bring about the removal of the terminal from Crown street, Ilert said, "Give any mother a paper that reads for the safety of her children and she'll sign it When these petitions were circulated, the terminal was about to be changed to my side of the street (His store is on the side with No. 7 school) and it was against this that the mothers really protested."

Ilert planned to make space for the busses behind his store when the terminal owned by the Metropolitan Insurance Company was closed.

Not Aware of Accidents

Attorney Louis Bruhn representing the Aduchefsky interests said his clients were not aware of any accidents having happened in front of their proposed terminal and that they were there all day Saturday and Sunday when the mishaps were purported to have occurred He argued that there were no greater hazards on North Front street than on Crown, and pointed out that the distance between the two places is only a block and that as far as using the Sears Roebuck store as a short-cut to Wall street, this practice could be continued.

Concerning Mr. Smith's statement that he represented 102 people, Attorney Bruhn said, "This matter has been given due publicity, and I think there would have been more people out to this meeting and the

Walther League to Convene Here June 13 to 14 to Observe Silver Jubilee of District

Dr. Walter A. Maier, of St. Louis, Will Preach Jubilee Sermon and Mayor Heiselman and M. J. Buddenhagen Will Give Addresses of Welcome to Delegates and Guests—Banquet at Governor Clinton Hotel Saturday Evening.

TO DELIVER SERMON

DROF. WALTER A MAIER

The Albany District of the International Walther League will hold its annual convention and Silver Jubilee here on Saturday and Sunday, June 13 and 14, 1936 Dr. Walter A Maier will come to Kingston from St. Louis, Mo, to preach the Jubilee Sermon to the 250 delegates and guests and act as the representative of the International Walther League

Dr. Walter A Maier, professor of Old Testament Interpretation and History at Concordia Seminary, St. Louis, has become the spiritual counselor of thousands of persons as a result of his broadcasts on the Lutheran Hour, carried on its own special network.

In 26 weeks the Lutheran Hour mail averaged 2,600 letters a week —a total of more than 68,000—and many of them addressed to Dr Maier personally, accepted his proffer of spiritual counsel to any person in the radio audience without church affiliations

A man of amazing energy and vitality, Dr. Maier managed to give a prompt and personal reply to every letter asking for advice, at the same time continuing his exacting duties and regular routine of classes at the seminary, and finding time somehow to write a book, "For Better, Not for Worse," a manual of Christian matrimony.

Born in Boston, Dr Maier attended Concordia Collegiate Institute, Bronxville, N. Y., for his preparatory education; received his A B degree at Boston University, graduated from Concordia Seminary, St Louis, and received his PH.D at Harvard, where he also won the highly valued Billings prize for oratory

During the war, Dr. Maier engaged in relief work among the interned and prisoners of war at several camps and served as camp pastor at Camp Gordon, Atlanta, Georgia. He was the first executive secretary of his church's young people's work, and since 1920 has been editor of the Walther League Messenger, one of the largest Christian young people's journals in the country. Since 1922 he has been professor of Old Testament Interpretation and History at Concordia Theological Seminary, the chief theological seminary of the Lutheran Synod of Missouri, Ohio and other states.

A pioneer in religious broadcasting, Dr. Maier was one of the founders of Station KFUO, located on the seminary campus, and from which the Lutheran Hour was broadcast each Sunday to many stations

Dr. Maier refused any compensation for his services in connection with the Lutheran Hour, which recently concluded its third series of broadcasts. The first series was given in 1931, over a national network; the second in the spring of 1935. The Lutheran Hour will return to the air next fall over an enlarged network.

His uncompromising emphasis on the crucified Savior, the divinely inspired authority of the Scriptures, and his vigorous denunciation of anti-Christian influences, atheism, Communism and other Godless theories, distinguishd Dr. Maier's radio talks. Dr. Maier is married and lives on the campus of Concordia Seminary, almost within the shadow of the KFUO antennae.

Dr. Maier will represent the International Walther League at the business sessions of the convention. The sessions of the convention will be held on Saturday afternoon, June 13 at 2:30 o'clock and on Sunday morning, June 14, at 10 o'clock.

Mayor Heiselman to Speak

Mayor Heiselman will officially welcome the delegates and guests of the Albany District Walther League to Kingston at the first business session of the convention. M. J. Buddenhagen, president of the Immanuel Senior Walther League, of Kingston, will give the address of welcome on behalf of the Walther League of Kingston.

Banquet at Governor Clinton

A special Silver Jubilee banquet will be held on Saturday evening, June 13, beginning at 7 o'clock at the Governor Clinton Hotel. A special entertainment program has been arranged for the evening Speakers for the banquet will be Dr. Maier, Mayor Heiselman, past presidents of the district and pastors of the district Joseph Fassbender, chairman of the Silver Jubilee Committee, will act as toastmaster.

Service at Municipal Auditorium

The convention and jubilee service will be held on Sunday afternoon, June 14, at 4 o'clock. Dr. Maier will be the speaker. A special district chorus, sponsored by the choral union, composed of 75 or more voices, will render several selections during the service A brass quartet, furnished by the Rossi Music Studio, composed of George Silkworth, Robert Craft, Jr., Sylvester Stepski and Max Teffel, will furnish the music for the service. The public is cordially invited to attend the service and hear Dr. Maier, whose fame has become nation-wide as a result of his broadcasts.

Search Is Conducted For Man Following Fire At Marlborough

Sergeant John Lockhart of the state police at Highland was kept busy Monday checking on the disappearance of William "Whitey" Dunn, 43, of Boston, who was at first believed to have burned to death when the 15 room house of Samuel Rosoff, New York subway builder, burned to the ground at Marlborough

Dunn with a number of other men, classed as vagrants, used the house as a camp, Sergeant Lockhart said, and they were in it when the fire started early Monday morning about 4 o'clock. Their lives were saved by Joe Cutillo. He noticed the fire on his way home from Poughkeepsie, where he works. He notified the men and they left the house. All were accounted for after the fire but Dunn, who had been in the dwelling before the men went to sleep. Prior to retiring they had imbibed heavily, it was said, of intoxicating spirits. "Canned heat" was among the things they had drunk.

The property, which is said to have cost Rosoff $35,000, formerly was the Tuerck mushroom farm. It had not been occupied for about six years, except by the vagrants.

Efforts made by the Marlborough Fire Department to save the structure went for naught, as the flames had too great a start. The house was brick-lined, which meant that the fire smouldered for a time after the wooden part of the place had been consumed.

Sergeant Lockhart conducted a thorough check on the disappearance of Dunn, who was thought to have lost his life in the fire, and learned that he had been seen around the railroad station and was headed for Boston Monday evening.

Money for Lindbergh.

Trenton, N. J., June 9 (AP).—Col Charles A. Lindbergh, who paid $50,000 ransom in a futile effort to save his kidnaped baby's life, had $14,-700 back today, but if the state's computations are correct, he probably never will get more of it. Prosecutor Anthony M. Hauck, Jr., of Hunterdon county, deposited to Col. Lindbergh's name in a New York bank yesterday all the money police found in possession of Bruno Richard Hauptmann, who died in the electric chair for the crime. The state claims Hauptmann disposed of the rest of the ransom money.

Bonus Not Scheduled.

Albany, N. Y., June 9 (AP)—State Tax Commissioner Mark Graves said today that World War Veterans need not include bonus funds received as part of their personal income when making out their 1937 state income reports Graves previously had decided that veterans who invest their bonus money in homes will be exempt from county and general municipal taxation up to the amount of the bonus so invested, with a limit of $5,000.

City Now Seeking Some One To Demolish Riber Building On The Strand

Will Be Torn Down To Make Room For the Proposed New Public Market in Downtown Section of the City.

NEW PLAYGROUND

Public Works Board Accepts Deed For Playground in Second Ward —Eliminate Dead Man's Curve.

The Board of Public Works at its regular monthly meeting Monday evening left in the hands of Mayor C J Heiselman and Superintendent David Conway the matter of having the old Riber building on East Strand torn down to make room for the proposed new public market The adjoining property long occupied by Carl M Pierson's lunch wagon, was recently purchased by the Downtown Business Men's Association and will also be used for market purposes.

The board is looking for a responsible person who will take down the three-story brick Riber building for the salvage. The second floor of the building is occupied by a family, who have been notified to vacate at once as it is planned to start work of demolishing the building shortly.

The board accepted the lease of eight acres of land in the rear of North Manor avenue for playground purposes. The use of the land had been tendered the city by the owner, James F Loughran, for the nominal rental of $1 a year. It is planned to erect soft ball courts on the new playground and also install playground equipment for the children

The park committee were authorized to purchase extra playground equipment, including three new slides and six children's merry-go rounds The purchases will be made through one of the local dealers if possible.

City Engineer James Norton called attention to the fact that property owners in the Roosevelt Park area were already starting to book up the house leaders to the sanitary sewer He said that owing to the fact that house leaders conveying rain water from the roof to the sanitary sewer on Main street, was what caused the sewage to back up into the houses on that street, as the sewer was not large enough to take care of the sewage and rain water as well. The city engineer believed that the board or the health board should adopt a restrictive ordinance forbidding the connecting of house leaders and cellar drains with sanitary sewers.

Up to Health Board.

The city engineer in his communication wrote. "In the Roosevelt Park area where all sanitary sewage has to be pumped it is advisable to prohibit connecting roof leaders to sanitary sewers due to the increased pumping charge and necessity for restricted flow to capacity of main. The present practice of connecting cellar drains and roof leaders to sanitary sewers should be forbidden by order at an early date"

It was brought out that it was believed that the question of connecting householders to sanitary sewers had been taken up by the Health Board some time ago and action taken. The board decided to refer the entire matter to the health board which meets this evening.

Dead Man's Curve.

The board accepted a deed for part of the land at the Cohen farm on Hurley avenue, and this additional land will be used to eliminate Dead Man's Curve by widening out the turn in the road. The deed will now be forwarded to the Common Council for acceptance

The board also took similar action on a deed from the Standard Oil Company for a piece of land at East Chester street and Broadway, which had been taken to widen the corner. The curve in Hurley avenue just inside the city line has proved a source of danger for many years, and cars driven at high speed have been unable to make the turn safely and many people have been injured and some killed.

To Tear Down House.

John F. Corcoran of 24 Post street and Lewis Davis of 120 Hunter street were given permission to tear down the city-owned building at 42-51 Gross street for the rough lumber in the building.

Ask Weed Removal.

Property owners are requested to cut down weeds and brush in vacant lots before the weeds and brush go to seed.

Landon Manager Leaves "First Ballot" Talk to Others, But Stands on Prediction of Unbeatable Lead From Start.

KEYNOTE TONIGHT

Different Scene Expected Tonight When Senator Steiwer of Oregon Delivers Keynote Address.

By EDWARD J DUFFY
Associated Press Staff Writer

Convention Hall, Cleveland, June 9 (AP)—In a perfunctory session which brought none of the party strife to the surface, the Republican convention opened today amidst a profusion of Landon sunflowers.

Committees on platform, and other questions were set up and the members called to meet in an endeavor to reconcile behind closed doors, if possible, the many disputes under way

Under the forceful if diplomatic guiding gavel of Chairman Henry P Fletcher the routine was dispatched in less than an hour

Some of the delegates and many of the holders of gallery tickets did not even show up John M Hamilton, manager for Governor Alf M Landon of Kansas, was at the center of an eager group right beneath Fletcher's nose during a large part of the proceedings He said "all is well" and let it go at that.

Senator Borah of Idaho, who is not a delegate this year, remained away; but Senator Vandenberg of Michigan—himself a possibility for the nomination in event of deadlock —visited with party leaders on the platform There were no demonstrations.

Caucuses of some state delegations later in the day were considered more important for the ultimate outcome than the opening session itself, if decisions on whom to support were to be reached It seemed likely, however, that several of the larger delegations would keep their own counsel to the last compared with the pellmell rush which put Herbert Hoover across in 1928 long before balloting began.

Senator Frederick Steiwer of Oregon, for whom this is the first convention, was given an ovation when formally elected to the temporary chairmanship

The convention recessed at 11 33 a. m. (EST) until 8 p. m. when Steiwer will deliver the keynote speech.

Storm Signals Aloft.

Cleveland, June 9 (AP).—Storm signals aloft, the Republican convention set off today toward a presidential nomination and platform of profound import for the party and perhaps national destiny.

The advantageous position held by the forces fighting for Governor Alf M Landon of Kansas was acknowledged on all sides.

Outwardly a deceptive calm prevailed But underneath the surface struggles over places on the ticket and principles on which to oppose the New Deal raged unabated

Bereft of the usual keynote speech which was deferred until this evening in the vast auditorium bordering on Lake Erie, the opening session at 11 a m. (EST) was confined to formalities

After prayers and anthems Cleveland's mayor, Harold H Burton, was first on the list of speakers, with an address of welcome

Around the walls on either side stood flags of the states in groups of three, but aside from these there were few decorations.

A get-down-to-business mood seemed to be asserting itself among the delegates as they awaited the keynote tonight by Senator Frederick Steiwer of Oregon.

Fewer Bandwagon References.

Delegates noticed that the frequent expressions of confidence coming from Landon leaders now contained fewer references to a bandwagon rush At the same time the failure of any coalition of anti Landonites to materialize had its effect No single "stop Landon" leader has emerged to fuse the opposition

For over an hour last night Senators Vandenberg of Michigan and Borah of Idaho walked through streets and parks, sometimes arm in arm This stroll aroused renewed rumors of cooperation against Landon but they went unverified

There was a conference too between Frank Gannett New York state publisher and Borah supporter, and Senator Vandenberg. Later George H Moses former senator from New Hampshire who is strong for Col Frank Knox closeted himself with Vandenberg But no announcement of significance came from these parleys

The arrival of Col Knox, Chicago publisher possibly today, was expected in some quarters to produce more indications of how the actual contest under way might shape up. Also the coming of former President Hoover for a speech tomorrow night

Controversy Over Platform Drops Into Welter of Convention Today

Cleveland June 9 (AP)—An explosive controversy over the Republican platform was tossed into the national convention today after Landon leaders had failed to agree among themselves on the more troublesome planks.

A series of secret conferences between easterners and westerners had failed to produce the formula with which supporters of the drive to nominate Gov Alf Landon of Kansas hoped to avert a wide open battle in the resolutions committee

Participants in the conferences included former Senator Henry Allen of Kansas, and William Allen White, representing the western group, and Ogden Mills and William B Bell, representing the eastern wing.

Others in the inner group of conferees included Herman Langworthy, of Kansas City, and Dr O. G Saxon, one of the professors recently taken on by the Republican national committee

The presence at the conferences of Mills and Bell attracted attention as neither had been conspicuous in the Landon drive Mills was secretary of the treasury under former President Hoover Bell is chairman of the Republican finance committee

Borah Starts Conflict.

Another development in the platform situation was the conflict stirred by Senator Borah's statement that "according to press dispatches, the Landon managers have turned the drafting of the platform on money over to those who are openly and uncompromisingly for the rigid gold standard."

John Hamilton, Landon campaign manager, immediately branded such statement as "absolutely untrue"

"It is not a fact that Governor Landon has turned over the question of a platform to the gold standard people," Hamilton added

An aggressive campaign by Borah for a "liberal" platform, increased the prospects for a row in the resolutions committee over the planks on money, foreign relations, the tariff and a constitutional amendment to permit minimum wage legislation by states

Decision Secret.

If the Landon forces had agreed on any of the major planks, they were keeping their decision to themselves They indicated they had agreed in principle on some of the issues, but seemed to have difficulty over phraseology

In principle, they were headed toward a plank calling for a constitutional amendment to permit minimum wage legislation, but were considering adding the words "if necessary" to conciliate opposition

Some of them favored a monetary plank looking toward stabilization of the dollar without committing the party to an immediate return to the gold standard Silver would not be mentioned

Tariff and farm planks were also giving the Landon forces trouble although there was strong sentiment for the plan advanced by Rep Hope (R-Kans) for subsidies to compensate for the tariff, together with a soil conservation plan

A Pungent Fact

Cleveland, June 9 (AP) The Republicans are becoming more sensitive hourly to a somewhat pungent fact It is that they must write a platform, as well as select a candidate

To many of the rank and file the hero appears to have arrived like a

Today's G.O.P. Program At Cleveland Convention

Cleveland, June 9 (AP)—This is the order of the Republican convention's day.

Henry P Fletcher, chairman of the Republican National Committee calls the convention to order at 11 a m, E S T

Singing of America and prayer precedes the address of welcome by Harold H Burton, mayor of Cleveland

More singing, follows then roll call, election of temporary officers and appointment of committees, including one to inform Senator Steiwer of Oregon that he is elected temporary chairman and is to deliver the keynote address.

The convention then adjourns until 8 p m, when it convenes to hear the keynote address

Floor Fight Over Farm Plank Looms

Cleveland, June 9 (AP)—A floor fight over the farm plank threatened at the Republican convention today as the Kansas delegation's efforts to write an "all candidates' program" hit snags.

The conferees split on production control, soil conservation, and foreign trade policies

Representative Hope (R.-Kan.), whose proposal for a tariff-equivalent subsidy for the farmers formed the nucleus of the plank suggestions, said the group would be called into session again, but he seemed rather doubtful of the outcome.

Belief was expressed in authoritative circles that if an impasse persisted in the delegation the several factions would magnify their differences before the platform committee with a possibility that the whole farm issue might be thrown on the floor of the convention.

Presumably, all reference to production control had been deleted, although there was understood to be considerable demand for it as a weapon against recurring surpluses

Some sections of the east were understood to want only a system of federal benefits for locally administered soil conservation while others in the same geographical area objected to everything except the subsidy

There was Republican sentiment, it was said, in certain parts of the northeast for most favored nations treatment in foreign commercial treaties Because of lowered import duties, spokesmen explained, those regions were able to import raw materials for manufacture at greatly reduced prices to the consumer.

Ordered To Show Cause.

Albany, N. Y., June 9 (AP)—The state division of milk control ordered the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company and Dairy Sealed, Inc., today to show cause why their milk licenses should not be revoked for selling milk and cream in New York city at prices below the established minimum Forming a Cabinet.

Brussels, Belgium, June 9 (AP)—Paul Van Zeeland, former coalition premier who resigned after Socialists won a plurality in parliamentary elections, accepted the task of forming a new cabinet today after the veteran Socialist leader, Emile Vandervelde, failed in a similar mission.

At Convention.

Cleveland, June 9. (AP).—Two sons of Former Republican presidents are at the convention—Teddy Roosevelt, Jr., and Charles Taft.

THE DOCTOR WILL KNOW

By WM. A. McBRIDE, Ph.G. Ph.Ch. B.S.

Thousands of ailing people every year decide they have some form of one of the more common diseases and although not knowing positively they go ahead and dose themselves with medicines someone else used who thought he, or she, had the "same symptoms."

Usually nothing favorable happens and at last, when a serious condition has developed, they begin to realize that only a doctor will know the right thing to do.

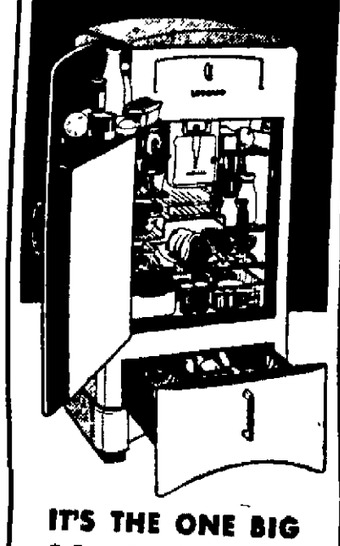

He is the logical health guardian, but if you do not call him at the first signs of failing health you may have cause for many years, to regret your negligence.

Do not take chances with your health, or in your choice of the druggist who fills the prescription the doctor writes for you.

Kingston Will Bid For Convention Here Of the County Firemen

At a meeting of the Kingston Veteran Volunteer Firemen's Association in the city hall, Monday night, Chief Joseph L. Murphy was nominated to appear before the Ulster County Volunteer Firemen's Association in Clintondale tonight and ask that the convention of that organization be held in Kingston the latter part of July, an exact date to be set later.

Chief Murphy welcomed the honor and privilege of being designated by the Veterans group to ask for the convention, which will be the first to be held by the Ulster County Volunteer Firemen's Association which was formed in Kingston a year ago. The chief in expressing his delight at being nominated, thanked the firemen for their efforts in helping to make the recent Mayors' Conference a success.

Mayor Conrad J. Heiselman was a speaker at the meeting last night too, and complimented the firemen for their activities toward making the mayors' convention a successful affair. He urged concentrated action for the Ulster Firemen's convention, explaning why Kingston is the most desirable place to hold it. "Our city is the county seat", said the mayor, "and we have all the facilities to make it convenient for those who attend the convention."

Other speakers were E. Frank Flanagan and Harry Kaplan, of the Uptown and Downtown Business Men's Association's respectively, who spoke unofficially for the two groups, encouraging the firemen in their enterprises for the convention.

Edward Moran, president of the Kingston Volunteer Firemen's Association presided at the meeting last night, and Frank Wynne acted as secretary in the absence of L. E. Dunne, regular secretary.

There are some 30 companies in the Ulster County Volunteer Firemen's Association, all of which will be represented at the convention. This means that between 350 and 500 firemen should be in Kingston for the event, which is expected to be featured by a colorful parade.

ENTHUSIASTIC MEETING OF MOTION PICTURE CLASS.

The Motion Picture Class, numbering some 40 young people of early 'teen age, who met at the home of the class leader, Mrs. Fred P. Luther, on Downs street last week, had a very interesting and enthusiastic evening with all but the Port Ewen unit present.

Different members of the class who were asked questions by Mrs. Luther, gave four-minute papers on the history and origin of motion pictures from their beginning up to the time when sound was added to the pictures. These papers also told in brief sketch form of many of the men who had been outstanding or pioneers in the production of motion pictures. The prize for the best paper was won by Helen Barton and was awarded by Mrs. Luther.

Then followed a review of "Gentle Julia," which the class had seen, and the criticisms of the picture by members of the class were not only apropos but pertinent and keen. A criticism on the minister in the picture was to the effect that he was not dignified and failed to close his service with either a prayer or a hymn. It could have had higher ideals was another criticism.

To the question as to which type of picture they liked best, the great majority voted for the high class musical picture, such as we have seen starring Grace Moore, Lawrence Tibbets, etc. Next in popularity was the family picture with the home atmosphere and ideals. The pictures liked least were the "mushy" ones for the title of which, let alone the pictures themselves, the young people showed great scorn. As to the war pictures they thought that they would not make anyone want to go to war or believe in war. So long as the villian in the gangster pictures had no peace of mind and was finally caught and punished, the young people thought they taught a good moral, even if it was negative in character.

Throughout the entire evening, the adults present were greatly impressed with the serious, intent interest of the entire class which was absolutely quiet and listening.

Henry Millonig, Jr., showed two reels of "Cradle Song" and "Huckleberry Finn," which is to be the picture studied before the next meeting and discussed at the meeting.

Obviously these classes are educating intelligent, thoughtful and wise critics of motion pictures for the future. After the entertaining and informing evening for all, the lads gathered up the chairs and assisted Mrs. Luther in re-arranging the rooms, a fine lesson in courtesy and consideration.

The grown-ups were Mrs. G. N. Wood, Mrs. A. Noble Graham, Mrs. Charles Terwilliger, Mrs. Norwood, Mrs. Henry Millonig, Jr., and Mrs. LeFerre.

All expressed themselves as astonished at the discriminating criticisms, many of which were exceedingly original and individual in character.

Mrs. Eugene Field Dies At Wisconsin Estate

Hosford Junction, Wis., June 9 (AP).—Mrs. Eugene Field, who died of a heart attack late yesterday at her Crystal Lake estate, will be interred in a vault beside the body of her poet-husband at Kenilworth, Ill.

Mrs. Field suffered from heart disease last month when she narrowly escaped loss of her 155 acre estate. A $2,000 loan from Field's fraternity, forestalled a foreclosure sale.

She would have been 80 next month.

Eugene, 2nd, one of her four surviving children, said Mrs. Field had invested $60,000 of the $200,000 fortune she got left on his death in Chicago in 1895 in the estate. She also invested in Chicago real estate.

The 68th commencement exercises at Cornell University will take place in Ithaca on June 15 when approximately 1,300 degrees will be conferred. Dr. Livingston Farrand, president of the University, will confer the degrees on the candidates in the ceremony to be held this year in the drill hall. This will be the first time that the huge building, which will provide ample room for the thousands of alumni, friends, and parents of graduates present, will be used for the exercises. Uncertain weather conditions have hitherto made it a problem whether to hold the ceremony indoors or out, but from now on the drill hall will be used in any case.

40 War Orphans Scholarships Listed

Principal Dumm has been notified by the State Department of Education, examinations and inspections division, at Albany, that 40 scholarships of $200 each for four years have been provided for resident children of soldiers, sailors or marines who enlisted from New York state and who died in the war as a result thereof.

Each candidate must be a resident of New York state and must send to the above department proof of his father's enlistment and death. These records may be a photostat or a certified copy. After the records have been examined they will be returned by registered mail.

Each of the scholarships, which will be awarded by arrangement on one state list in order of merit, shall entitle the holder thereof to his tuition, in a sum not exceeding $100 per year, in any approved college, university or normal school of his selection located within the state, the course of study not being restricted. The scholarships will not pertain to graduate study after a bachelor of arts degree. The tuition, not exceeding $100 per year, will be paid by the state together with an additional sum of $100 for the maintenance of the holder of each such scholarship while attending upon instruction under these scholarships, no annual payment being made to an individual for a period longer than four years.

Competition is based on the regular Regents' examinations to be held June 15-19, 1936, at Kingston High School, in the following subjects: English, four years; American history and any one of the following: Latin, three years; French, three years; intermediate algebra, physics or chemistry. All three papers must be written this June for this year's scholarships, even though a student may have passed Regents' examinations in the subjects previously. Each paper must bear a passing mark of at least 65 per cent.

The colleges will include all institutions in New York state authorized to confer degrees, provided they are registered by the Regents board as institutions of college grade, maintaining approved standards. All candidates will please notify Mr. Dumm at once of their intention to compete. A war orphans' scholarship must be accepted within ten days after notification, or the scholarship will be considered vacant.

Private Funeral For John H. Hammond

Gloucester, Mass., June 9 (AP).—Private funeral services for John Hays Hammond, Sr., famous mining engineer who died suddenly yesterday, will be held this afternoon at 4:30 (EST) at his palatial estate, Lookout Hill.

The 81-year old man who made millions out of his ability to judge mines and their potentialities was found dead yesterday in his study by his secretary, William Griffin. Dr. Harry Durrill said a heart ailment caused his death.

Only a short time before, Mrs. Edward M. House, wife of Col. House, former adviser of President Woodrow Wilson, had called but had left without seeing him.

Hammond's ashes—the body will be cremated—will be interred in Greenwood cemetery, New York city, tomorrow.

AgapaeRebekahLodge Held Memorial Rites

On Sunday evening, June 7, a memorial service was held in the lodge hall at Bearsville by the I. O. O. F. Lodge No. 632 and their Rebekah Lodge No. 632, in honor of the deceased members of both lodges. The address was given by the Rev. A. Walter Baker, pastor of the Lutheran Church of Woodstock, who enumerated the famous women of the Bible and expounded their good deeds and lofty characters. The Rev. Mr. Baker also dwelt upon the good that is done by the Rebekah and Odd Fellow lodges, both as lodges and as individual members, and that every member becomes a better person because of the lodge influence.

The prayer and benediction were given by the Rev. Orson Rice, pastor of the Methodist Church of Woodstock, who also spoke very kindly of the lodges.

A beautiful memorial service was given by Agapae Rebekah Lodge, a white carnation being laid at the foot of an illuminated cross as the name of each of the departed brothers and sisters were read. This cross stood under a flower bedecked white arch, at the center of "gates ajar." Evergreens and many flowers gave the effect of a garden. The decorations were charming.

Miss Claudia Williams was the musician, "America" was sung, and also a duet was rendered by Shaffer Vredenburgh and Miss Claudia Williams, "Jesus Savior Pilot Me," Mr. Vredenburgh singing tenor and Miss Williams the alto. At the end of the service, the congregation sang "Nearer My God to Thee." The master of ceremonies was Matthew Williams of West Hurley.

Saturday Is Last Day To Help Blind Workers

Saturday, June 13, will be the last chance to help the hundreds of blind workers who are depending on successful sales for their support. Those who have not visited the sale at 304 Wall street are asked to do so before the end of the present week. The cause is most worthy and in addition one can secure some household article which is greatly needed. It is the expectations of the various committees that this sale will be larger than any recently held in Kingston. If everyone who is interested, gives some degree of patronage to the sale, the hopes of the committees will surely be realized.

The housewife will find brooms of all kinds including house and street brooms, whiskbrooms, hearth brooms and fancy brooms. The blind also make mops of every kind, wet and dry mops, bathtub mops with long handles to avoid stooping over, and dish mops in various colors to match the kitchen. In the shop there are also shoebags and laundry bags, dusters, leather goods, toys, games and hundreds of other articles which are a part of everyday household equipment.

The assignments of times and committees in charge of the sale on the closing day, June 13, are as follows:

10 a. m.-2 p. m., Reformed Church of The Comforter—Mrs. Saul Smith, chairman; Mrs. Frank Brown, Mrs. Samuel Williams, Mrs. Harvey Burgher.

2-5:30 p. m., St. Peter's Catholic Church—Mrs. A. Bott, chairman; Mrs. Max Abel, Mrs. John Clark, Mrs. James Connelly, Miss Florence Cordts, Miss Marie Dugan, Mrs. Peter Fox, Mrs. Charles Gassen, Mrs. W. Gehringer, Mrs. C. Ketterer, Mrs. Carl Mellert, Miss Emma Rice, Mrs. Frank Rist, Mrs. J. Schwalbach, Miss Pearl Stock, Mrs. E. Thomas, Mrs. L. Bruder.

5:30-9 p. m., Trinity Lutheran Church—Mrs. Harry P. Dodge, chairman; Mrs. W. Pretzsch, Mrs. Emily Marks, Miss M. Plattner, Mrs. C. Henninger, Mrs. Lewis Myers, Mrs. Fred Schwenk.

Held for Action Of Next Grand Jury

Edward Seymour, 12 Roosevelt avenue, Kingston, and Henry Seymour, 38 North Main street, Ellenville, proprietors of the Kingston Modern Home Supply, are being held in $1,000 bail each to await the action of the next grand jury on a charge of burglary third degree.

The Seymours are charged by Mrs. Frances Meyers of Lake Katrine of breaking into her home on or about May 8 and removing an electric refrigerator, a white gold wrist watch and $10 in currency. Trooper Arthur Reilly arrested them on May 14 at Accord, on information furnished by Mrs. Meyers.

Col. Green Dies At Lake Placid Club

Lake Placid, N. Y., June 9 (AP).—Heart disease and complications due to age were blamed today for the death of Col. Edward H. Robinson Green, son of Hetty Green, the financial wizard.

Death came to him late yesterday at the Lake Placid Club, closing a business career which one account says included work as a $5-a-month section hand on one of his mother's railroads.

Under the guidance of his canny parent, Green became her personal assistant in the management of a farflung industrial and financial domain.

His body was taken to his estate at Round Hill, South Dartmouth, Mass., for funeral services. Burial will be at Bellows Falls, Vt.

Green, who was born in London, 67 years ago, got the real start of his business career as a clerk in the office of the Connecticut River Railroad.

He became director of railroads and banks, served as chairman of the Texas State Republican Committee for three terms and attended several national conventions as a delegate of his party.

He leaves his widow, the former Mabel E. Harlow, and a sister, Mrs. Matthew Astor Wilkes, of New York.

Ramsdell was brought back here late yesterday from New Brunswick, N. J., for arraignment in county court today on a first degree grand larceny indictment.

Ramsdell's sister, Mrs. Lila Papen, of Albany, is free under $10,000 bond. She pleaded innocent to charges involving specific fraud of $606 while she was acting head of the tax refund bureau.

POLITICS at Random

By BYRON PRICE
(Chief Of Bureau, Associated Press, Washington)

WHATEVER place history may accord eventually to the Cleveland Republican convention, it is safe to say it will be written down as one incident in a long chain of developments—not as an isolated event, significant for its own sake.

In June, 1932, when the party was assembling to choose a ticket and write a platform in Chicago, the following words appeared in this column:

"The issues on which the party split 20 years ago were economic issues—the tariff, taxes, the concentration of wealth and the regulation of big business.

"The same two schools of thought are present today in Chicago. The party has been reunited in a physical sense, having learned a bitter lesson; but not one of the questions on which it divided in 1912 has been solved to the mutual satisfaction of Old Guard and insurgents."

These statements apply with the same force today to Cleveland. For a quarter of a century now Republicans have been seeking the perfect balance between two factions whose economic views are almost as different as day and night. And the end of the story is not yet.

Keynote Is 'Confidence'

WITH Mr. Hughes as the nominee in 1916, the party experienced an appreciable swing toward liberalism. An era of conservative dominance began with Mr. Harding and continued with Mr. Coolidge. Mr. Hoover was put forward for the nomination as a liberal, and had the support of outstanding liberals who later parted company with him.

About Cleveland and its nominee? The developments of the coming campaign will answer that question more clearly than it possibly could be answered by the convention, but some things are apparent.

The Cleveland keynote is one of "confidence." Long in advance, the dominant party leaders agreed that the very first duty of the convention would be to put forward a "safe" candidate and platform.

In other words, the whole logic of the situation decreed beforehand that the Republican party of 1936 be the conservative party—at least in the sense of being more conservative than the Democratic party of 1936.

But the practical exigencies also demanded in advance that the second duty of the convention would be to give some encouragement and comfort to the liberals. That requirement was easily provable as a matter of simple election mathematics.

Here is the same old question over again.

Shades Of 1912

OF COURSE every campaign year has varied the picture somewhat, without changing essentials.

Into this general pattern fit all of the threads of the events leading up to, and culminating in, the Cleveland convention. The old economic issues remain supreme, and on these issues the party remains of two minds.

The left-wing attack on monopoly, the right-hand wing protest against corporation taxes, the dispute over the tariff, the pains of internal strife over the regulation of business—the whole story reads like a page from the political primer of 1912.

So Cleveland takes its place as one of a series of incidents. Its troubles are links in a long chain of trouble, for they illustrate once more that the natural line of division does not run between the parties but through them.

Talk of "coalition" arouses interest, but where does it get? Convention time finds most of the Republican liberal leaders in line, but grumbling, at Cleveland, and most of the Democratic conservative leaders in line, but grumbling, at Philadelphia.

The need for realignment is one point on which the political theorists and the practical politicians agree. Yet what is either party doing about it?

Four Companies Were Chartered in Ulster

Albany, June 9 (Special)—A total of 8,303 stock companies were granted charters during the first five months of 1936, it was revealed today by the Division of Corporations in the State Department. This total was practically identical with that for the same period of 1935.

During the month of May this year, Ulster county had four companies chartered, with a total capitalization of $35,000. One of the four concerns had no given capital, but decided to issue no par value stock. The total number of new concerns throughout the state for May, 1936, was 1,604, an excess over the preceding month by 24. Of the 1,604 corporations, 833 were capitalized at a total of $16,950,000, and the remaining 771 had capitals of stock having no par value.

The five counties of greater New York accounted for 1,360 of the month's organizations of which 696 were capitalized at $13,558,000 while 664 were authorized to issue stock at no par value. Westchester as usual took first honors numerically among the counties outside of greater New York with 48 formations, Erie was in second place with 30, Nassau closely following with 29, Monroe, listing 21, was in fourth place while Albany captured fifth place with 13. Saratoga and Erie lead as to upstate capitalization, each showing a total of $530,000.

Real estate companies maintained their usual lead with 406 while garment making concerns again held second place with 90. There was a noticeable increase in air conditioning, electrical appliance and refrigerating concerns while beauty parlor companies, ice cream and soft drink enterprises showed a decided upward movement. One company was chartered for the purpose of renting shirts and other kindred articles.

There were 558,744 arrests for intoxication in 369 American cities in the calendar year 1935.

GIFT PLANK

These are the days when almost everybody has one or more platform planks to offer to the major political parties. The Automobile Manufacturers Association asks the Republican National Convention for a plank approving the principles of reciprocal trade agreements with foreign countries. The Democratic Party is already on record for such treaties. A part of the statement of the association reads "The import of goods into the United States should be promoted on a competitive basis so that the customer may benefit and so that adequate dollar exchange may be created for our vitally important exports."

Not all manufacturers' associations agree with the automobile industry in its view that foreign trade must work both ways and that imports are essential if there are to be exports. But expression of opposed views is wholesome in a democracy.

SPLIT DECISIONS

Regarding recent decisions by the United States Supreme Court there has been, on the whole, ready acceptance by the American public including individuals and groups disappointed by them. The people believe in the Constitution, and believe, as a distinguished jurist once said, that "the Constitution is what the Supreme Court says it is."

Yet some decisions leave many an open-minded citizen puzzled. They are those in which the court divides almost evenly, with groups of justices delivering conflicting opinions in which they argue like opposing lawyers in an ordinary court trial. A typical example is the recent decision invalidating the law enacted by Congress in 1934 to help bankrupt cities, counties and other political subdivisions reduce their indebtedness through the federal bankruptcy courts. Presumably the decision is sound. In any event it must be accepted. But there is this disquieting fact—that it was another five-to-four decision, in which a familiar group of "conservative justices" was opposed to another familiar group of "liberal justices," the latter reinforced by the Chief Justice.

In such a situation, obviously the weight of opinion is so nearly balanced that the decision, while legally as effective as if it were unanimous, is not so convincing morally as verdicts of so important a body ought to be. Many citizens, including many members of the bar, without regard to partisanship or particular issues, have long doubted the wisdom of allowing acts of Congress to be overruled by so slight a majority, feeling that perhaps a minimum rule of six-to-three used by some state courts, would be better in the long run.

SCIENTIFIC RELIGION.

A religious scientist used to be a rare bird. Scientists were expected to be atheists, or at least agnostics—"not-knowers". Now this is changing. Science admits God again to its universe. And it seems as if the greatest scientists today are the most religious. Not in the old, formal sense, to be sure. Their religious beliefs are modern. But they represent a new unity. They have faith, and their religious faith agrees with their scientific faith, something that was difficult in the days of Darwin, Huxley and Ingersoll.

The physicists, with their new theories of matter and their fascinating revelations of atoms and energy, are leaders in this field. One of the greatest of them, Arthur H. Compton of the University of Chicago, seems to be preaching a religious-scientific philosophy that intelligent men and women today might get really excited about. He declares flatly his belief in a Creator of the Universe "whose existence seems by far the most reasonable basis for accounting for our world." He believes that the Creator knows what he is doing, and has a purpose, and works in and through mankind, that if we go along and do our best we are probably destined for "the highest position in the Universe with respect to intellectual life." Thus men, he concludes, are "God's partners." It is a strange, new idea—yet an old one. Didn't St. Paul speak of men as "co-workers with God"?

CHILDREN AND RADIO

A study of several thousand children in New York, 10 to 13 years old, reveals the surprising fact that kids are quite human. The inquirers were especially interested in radio reaction, and here is what they found. The children listened to radio programs on an average one hour a day. They preferred to listen in the evening, spending their daylight leisure outdoors. The girls were most interested in programs of "sentiment, home and family life," the boys in those "mysterious and virile."

They preferred adult actors to juvenile ones and disliked programs intended to appeal to children. They would rather listen to the radio than read, play a musical instrument or solve a puzzle, but ranked radio entertainment lower than movies, newspaper "funnies" and stage orchestras. And here is a final item to prove that the heart of juvenile America is still sound. The boys would rather play baseball than listen to the radio, even when it's a baseball broadcast.

That Body of Yours

DENTAL INSPECTION

"We find pain, fear, worry, loss of use, digestive disorders, undernourishment, lowered vitality both physical and mental, lowered resistance to infectious diseases, focal infection (where disease in one organ is setting up trouble in another organ or tissues), malformation of the jaws, irregularity of the teeth and disfigurement of the face. This is only a partial list but can any other part of the body show such a dangerous history if neglected?"

All the above symptoms and they form but a "partial list" are the result of neglecting the care and treatment of children's teeth. I am quoting Dr. G. Pollock, Thorold, Ontario, in Oral Health.

In our cities the nurse and dentist go carefully over the teeth of the school children. Parents are notified of defects and if unable to pay for treatment get the necessary treatment free through the city or school authorities.

"In the early stages of decay the cavity can be cleaned and filled with little or no feeling and the children who have never had a toothache or heard a lot of stories about the dentist's office make exceptionally good patients."

"If the cavity is neglected and a 'jumping' toothache occurs when food gets into it, the child stops chewing on that side, may bolt his food and have digestive disturbances. If he has heard stories of the terrible pain from filling or removing teeth, he becomes frightened and worried. The nerve or pulp dies, organisms manufacture poisons, and trouble—rheumatism or other pains—occur in joints and tissues.

Finally the tooth gets pushed out if it is the first or milk set, or is extracted if it is a permanent tooth. Loss of teeth means loss of use and a change in the shape of the face."

Not only would the above suffering, illness and disfigurement be avoided if all children in the rural schools as well as the city schools were examined and treated, but the general health of the child, his regularity of attendance and his mental progress would all be helped.

Dr. Pollock was able to show that in one eight-roomed school, three miles from town, after six years' dental service, the attendance percentage had increased from 93 to 98 per cent. At the same time the number of pupils with dental defects had decreased from 95 to 50 per cent.

Prince Otto's restoration has received Nazi approval and some German ministers will be among the new monarch's advisers, the foreign affairs commentator declared.

Chapter 42

UNTANGLED

DIRK remembered. Remembered Madame's mention of a pale girl—a fair girl. He said, "I remember." He had never thought of it again.

"Torrobin said if you were a lawyer you weren't a safe prospect. Chow said yes, you were, because you were young. Young enough to be a fool. She gave him your name, said you lived in Westchester, and to look you up. She gave him Freddy Nevin's name, too. Natalie was certainly a talker. But Torrobin said lawyers were out. Said he'd like to get you, himself. Meaning about his nose.

"I went back to the van, and Olga, Pipolo's wife, was there. She said Pipolo had gone out to phone for an ambulance, that we must get Roddie to a hospital. We took him to Bellevue that night. He was still unconscious, and seriously hurt.

"I found your name in the phone-book. More than ever I wanted to see you since I knew you were a lawyer. I knew that Roddie had to break away from Torrobin, whatever happened. I wanted to know about extradition laws, to know if—with only Torrobin's word as evidence—they could take Roddie out of New York and bring him down to Texas.

"Looking back now, seeing more clearly, I know Torrobin could have proved nothing without involving himself. He had used the money. But then—then I was frightened. I couldn't think. I wondered if they would take Roddie while he was ill.

"They said that Roddie would live—with an operation, and the right care. I wanted him to have everything. It would take money. Pipolo said he could get the money, would bring it to me. Monday night.

"The show was going to Atlantic City and Pipolo and Olga were going with it in their trapeze act. But Pipolo would come back. Olga gave me some money that night, so that I could go to a hotel. They wouldn't let me stay at the hospital with Roddie.

"I didn't go to the hotel. Instead I found out where you lived, and came here to your home—came by subways and surface cars. It was a long trip. I thought I would never finish it. But I knew you would help me if I could find you.

"It was Rupert I found. I thought Chow had made a mistake. In my wild state I never thought there might be more than one Joris who was a lawyer. But he was a lawyer, he assured me of that. And since I had come so far . . . I found though I couldn't tell him everything. It seemed I couldn't trust anybody with Roddie's secret . . . even Pipolo and Olga. I believe I could have trusted you. But that was before . . .

"Rupert questioned me about other things I told him the truth in everything except my name. Even that was the truth. Hope is really my name, though I've never been called that. My father named me Lasca. You know 'Lasca?'

" . . . Lasca used to ride
On a mouse-gray mustang, close to my side.
With blue serape, and bright-belled spur. . . .

"Cowboys like the poem. But my mother tucked in the name of Hope. I think Hope Devine is a . . . It's embarrassing as a name. But I felt if Rupert knew my name—the name I was known by—he might be able to trace Roddie through it. He might . . . He wasn't himself that night. He might somehow give Roddie away—for I meant to tell him all I must to get advice.

"I COULDN'T think clearly, as I say. I only knew I was sorry Roddie was known as Roddie in the circus. Only there he was known as Roddie Torrobin. Every one assumed he was Torrobin's son. Only Olga and Pipolo knew he was not.

"Rupert wouldn't advise me, but he offered me a refuge. Such a refuge! It was like a door into heaven. Looking back, I see how silly my thoughts were. I thought he wanted me because he liked me.

"Of course I realized he hardly knew what he was doing, but even so, I thought I could win him, make him love me, and Roddie would be safe. Roddie would have everything he needed . . . and with Rupert's influence and knowledge of the law . . .

"Later I realized how wrong it was to bring my trouble into your house, to make it yours and Rupert's. But then I was thinking only of myself and Roddie.

"And when you came home, and I saw you again—most of all when we sat together on the stair that night—I came near telling you everything. Something about you made me want to trust you, confide in you. Only I was too tired to straighten it out in my mind—to make it clear. I thought, 'Later.'

"Early next morning I went to the hospital, and they let me see Roddie for just a minute. I told Mary I had been to church, and I had. There was a service at the hospital.

"I went and got my trunk, too, with the money Olga had lent me, and I telephoned Pipolo in Atlantic City. I told him where I was staying. Nothing more over the phone. He said he would meet me, as he promised, would send for me.

"He sent a taxi for me, a taxi owned by a friend of his. That was the night of 'The Black Swan.' I told him that night about my marriage—not how it had happened, only that I had married, and whom. Pipolo warned me not to let Torrobin know.

"Pipolo had sensed that Torrobin had some deadly hold on Roddie and me, and he feared, since I had married well, that he would try extortion of some sort.

"That was why I hadn't wanted it in the papers—my marriage. I mean. That was why I was glad I had used the name of Hope. Torrobin had never heard that name.

"Torrobin did not show up at the hospital while Roddie was there. He was probably nursing his bruised face. Pipolo — knowing I had a secret—asked me if I had made a clean breast of everything to Rupert, and when, I said no, he was troubled.

"I was troubled, too. It began to look as if marriage might not prove a solution. Yet Rupert seemed to want me to be happy, to be trying to please me. I still hoped I might win him.

"That night the taxi-driver thought some one was following us, and later he told Pipolo that a man came to his house and questioned him, accused him of wrecking his car. Pipolo supposed it was some scout of Torrobin's, but the description of the questioner sounded as if it might have been you. I couldn't believe it was you. But I began to be afraid. Afraid that Torrobin might have been to you with the truth about Roddie, and poisoned your mind against me."

DIRK laid an arm about her.

"And so you didn't confide in me?"

"I didn't dare. I didn't know what you might do, how you might feel. My whole thought was to get Roddie well, and away. I didn't need Pipolo's money that night, and I was able to pay back what Olga had given me. I had deposited my check from Rupert, and I had brought money for Roddie's operation, and care."

"You had money on you," Dirk said, "in addition to the jewels? I'd have been more worried still if I had known. It was I following you. I think you know my motives now. I had just got home, when you came to the gate and waved, and went off alone in a taxi, and later picked up a man . . ."

"Pipolo," she said. "He was staying with his brother, Tony Fazzini. But I hadn't the jewels on. I had taken them off and given them to Rupert. All except the coronet, and it wasn't real. Roddie thought it was. It dazzled him. I knew it would."

She smiled. "So I kept it on, and the dress, too. I wanted Roddie to see them. I wanted him to see me all prosperous and happy—the last thing before he went under the ether. I was so afraid for him.

"That was why I had gone to church the day before, and prayed and prayed. I don't think I had ever prayed till then."

Barnum Was Right—One Born Every Minute!

Heat Prostration

By BROOKE PETERS CHURCH

Mothers are very prone to forget that sun-stroke is not necessarily the result of exercising in the sun. It is quite as possible for a baby lying in his carriage asleep to have sun-stroke as it is for the child who is on his feet and active.

Mrs. X was startled when she brought her baby in from his morning nap to find the child suffering from heat prostration. He had been lying quietly in his carriage partially shaded by the hood and with only his legs exposed. He had not cried or kicked or in any way exerted himself. Sunlight is good for children. And yet here he was, limp, exhausted, in a state of obvious collapse.

It did not dawn on Mrs. X that the hood of the carriage acted as an oven, catching and heating the air, and that the sunlight on the baby's legs had been overstimulating the skin of that part of his body for hours.

Sunlight is strong medicine and must be used with care. It is not the exercise which causes sun stroke, but the effect of the sun's rays. The child who keeps moving, and who is perspiring, is safer than the one who sits or lies still in the sun. The baby put out in his carriage during the summer months when the sun's rays are direct and strong, should be shaded and permitted some circulation of air.

He can have a few minutes of sunbath before his regular bath in the morning, and can have it directly on his bare skin. But he should not be left to lie asleep in the sun even with the hood of the carriage and a mosquito netting to cover him. The shade of a tree through which a little sunlight filters here and there is probably the best place for his carriage.

Christopher Fails

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

"I DON'T believe I know Mrs. Fine Duckling," began Christopher Columbus Crow.

"Top Notch said the same," replied Mrs. Quacko Duck sweetly. "As she is a very busy duck with a great, great, great many duck engagements I can quite understand that she hasn't much time to spend with me.

"In fact I'm the only one over here for whom she has any time. And usually I must go and see her, for it is really wrong to expect her to come over to the pond when she has so much to do.

"Then, too, the pond is so noisy. We can talk so much better where she is."

"Does she live in Quackerville?" asked Christopher.

"No, oh no," replied Mrs. Quacko Duck. "Mrs. Fine Duckling wouldn't care for Quackerville. It's too snobbish there. As Mrs. Fine Duckling often says to me:

"'Mrs. Quacko, you're a remarkable duck. Your manners are excellent, you come from a fine family of ducks, you are a perfect duck lady and yet you're never snobbish and you never put on airs.'"

Mrs. Quacko smiled sweetly at Christopher.

"Is there anything else I can do for you?" she asked so politely that Christopher actually hadn't the nerve to ask any more about Mrs. Fine Duckling.

"I'll find out later who she is and where she lives," he said to himself, as he flew off after bidding a polite good-bye to Mrs. Quacko. She was smiling happily to herself.

A Washington Daybook

By PRESTON GROVER

WASHINGTON—Certain midwestern Democrats think Harry L. Hopkins, WPA administrator, is responsible to a large extent for Governor Landon's rise as a presidential threat.

They do not hesitate to say that they are disgruntled about what may happen to their state and congressional tickets if Landon should win the Republican nomination and carry part of the midwest.

Harry L. Hopkins

As they view it, Landon has had many opportunities to advance politically by his exchanges with Hopkins, these including the one of some time ago when the WPA administrator said at a press conference that Kansas had not contributed a "thin dime" to match federal relief funds.

Attracted Attention

THEY complained that tended to focus attention upon the Kansas governor as a target of the New Deal even before Postmaster General Farley's more recent reference to Landon and a "typical prairie state." Their complaint was intensified when Landon was able to show Kansas had contributed relief funds, even though the sum was less than the WPA administrator said was the state's share.

But their displeasure reaches back even beyond that. As one Kansas Democrat related it, this is the situation of which they complain:

In the days of the federal emergency relief administration Hopkins allocated substantial sums to Kansas, along with other states, to take care of the unemployed. The governor in each state was made largely responsible for setting up the administrative machinery to get the money out to the people who needed it.

See Landon Benefit

THIS tended to make the lieutenants on relief believe the governor in each state was to some degree to be credited for the aid they were getting. These Democrats suggest Landon benefited along with other governors.

It lent especially to Landon's popularity, they contend, because he, as a Republican, was able to obtain substantial relief grants from a Democratic national administration. They say it contributed much to his re-election as governor in 1934.

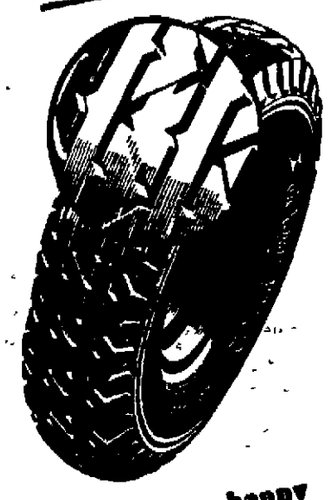

Ultimately the advent of WPA to replace FERA brought a change in the state management of federal distributions, but the midwestern Democrats thought harm had been done them needlessly.

Darkened Sun to Guide Science Toward End of 'Green Rainbow'

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
Associated Press Science Editor.

Cambridge, Mass., (AP).—The end of the "green rainbow", a mystery that has puzzled astronomers for 50 years, will come within the possible reach of two young American scientists with the total eclipse of the sun in Russia and Siberia on June 19.

The "green rainbow" is the green lines of the spectrum, made by the sun's pearly corona during eclipse. What these green lines are made of and what the whole corona is made of are long unsolved mysteries.

Carry Automatic Equipment

The two young men who bid fair to end the puzzle are Dr. Donald H Menzel, of Harvard, and Dr. Joseph C. Boyce, of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. They head a joint expedition to observe the eclipse at Ak-Bulak in the Ural mountains They carry the most superb equipment — eight spectographs, mostly automatic—ever made for a solar eclipse.

This pair probably came closer, two years ago, to solving the mystery of the corona substance than anyone else. They announced evidence that oxygen in a meta-stable state (in a peculiar kind of excitation unknown in oxygen on earth) was responsible for much of the mysterious coronal glow.

To Study Heat Rays

That was provisionally accepted as solving one of astronomy's major mysteries. But most astronomers preferred to await further eclipses.

One of the numerous subjects of study at Ak-Bulak will be the infrared, or heat, spectrum of the corona. These tenuous heat rays, it is hoped, will yield the additional information necessary to identify the stuff that makes the corona.

The corona has never been seen except during the few moments of total eclipse. So there literally are only a few minutes in a century to study it.

Only when the moon completely covers the sun is the mysterious corona visible. Called a total eclipse, this phenomenon will be seen on June 19 in parts of Russia and Siberia.

Its white streamers shoot millions of miles outward from the sun. Yet they seem to be almost complete vacuum. An evidence of their thinness was the great comet of 1843, which passed at a velocity of 350 miles a second through at least 300,000 miles of corona.

Eclipse 75 Miles Wide

Had the corona been anything like earth's atmosphere, astronomers point out, it inevitably would have consumed the comet as meteors are burned in the air's resistance.

The June 19 eclipse will last two and a half minutes Its path is 75 miles wide. It starts in the Mediterranean near Tripoli, passes over Athens soon after sunrise, veers northeastward until well across Siberia and then turns southeast to end in the Pacific ocean about 400 miles west of the Midway islands.

It will not be visible anywhere in the western hemisphere Near its path are the cities of Omsk and Tomsk in Siberia

There are two American expeditions. The other, by Georgetown university and the national geographic society, will observe from Kustanai, also in the Urals Both Kustanai and Ak-Bulak are more than 700 miles southeast of Moscow. This expedition also will make study of the corona one of its objectives.

Fruit Farm Group Rewards N.Y. Growers

Albany, June 9—Giving added color to one of the State Fair's most colorful displays—the fruit department—Director Albert L. Brown today announced a "fruit farm" collection will be exhibited by growers at New York's annual exposition at Syracuse, September 6 to 12.

Superintendent P. M Eastman of the fruit department, who also is assistant director of the Bureau of Plant Industry, New York State Department of Agriculture and Markets, described the "fruit farm" display as "a distinct encouragement to fruit growers to vie for the most extensive and best arranged exhibit of their own fresh fruit"

Entries in the "fruit farm" group will be limited to eight collections, but at least $20 will be set aside for each exhibitor whose products do not qualify for the first prize of $60, the second prize of $40 or the third prize of $25. Superintendent Eastman said All entries in the fruit department of the New York State Fair are restricted to New York fruit growers.

Both Director Brown and Superintendent Eastman agreed, following a conference here, that indications point to the best display of fruit ever exhibited at the New York State Fair. In the commercial exhibits, classes have been set up for the well-known varieties of apples packed in crates or bushel baskets. Entries in the crate classes may be packed in either the New York and New England approved crate or the western New York crate.

Seneca, Onondaga and Cayuga counties will be the competing counties in the class set aside for "county, society or district collections".

In addition to the "fruit farm" collection which will include apples, pears, cherries, peaches, grapes and all other fruit grown in New York state, provision is made in the single plate classes for most of the newly introduced varieties of fruit, as follows: apples—Lodi, Melba, Milton, Macoun, Medina and Kendall; pears — Tyson, Gorham; peaches—Valiant, Mikado and Golden Jubilee; grapes—Golden Muscat.

Mr. Eastman has appointed the following judges for the fruit show: Dr. Frank H. Lattin, Albion; Dr. M. B. Hoffman, Department of Pomology, College of Agriculture, Ithaca, and Richard Wellington, New York State Agricultural Experiment Station, Geneva.

New Pea Grading Method Approved

Geneva, N. Y., June 9.—A notice to packers and distributors of canned peas issued by the Food and Drug Administration of the U. S. Department of Agriculture sets up as the official method for determining the maturity of peas, a chemical method proposed by Dr. Z I Kertesz, chemist at the State Experiment Station here.

Extensive studies made at the station have shown that flavor and toughness of peas are closely associated, and that in scoring these two seem to maintain the same proportions, one moving up or down with the other Tenderness, on the other hand, is determined by the maturity of the peas, thus a method of estimating the maturity of the peas will at the same time provide an index to quality A chemical method for determining the quality of canned peas by determining the maturity was proposed by Dr Kertesz in 1934 and the results of a survey on the applicability of the procedure reported in a technical publication from the station This work revealed that the proportion of alcohol-insoluble solids in the peas is a good index of maturity. These solids include proteins, starch, and most other compounds the proportion of which increases in peas as they mature. The determination is simple and the results are reproducible.

"Quality is the summation of all of those properties of the canned product which contribute to its value, and in canned peas chief emphasis is placed on clearness of liquor, absence of defects, uniformity of size, tenderness and maturity, and flavor," says Dr. Kertesz "Determining quality by tasting is too uncertain, but with dependable chemical or physical methods for determining quality, the producer, the canner, and the consumer with all benefit from a better standardization of the canned product and from the proper labeling of canned products of low quality."

The investigations showed that canned peas of low quality or made from mature peas contain more than 23 per cent alcohol-insoluble solids. According to the new federal regulation, all cans containing such peas must be labeled "Below U. S Standard. Low quality but not illegal"

Of course, these are lean years. More people are leaning on the government than ever before.

Horse Sense

I grew up in a little town; and thought it such a pity
That I lived there, for I oft heard: "Smart folks come from the city."
I read of brilliant persons, who had met with great success;
And every time, it seemed to me, New York was the address.
So I fared forth, while young, to learn what caused a city mind
To work so fast — while country brains remained so far behind.
And I found "City minds excel!" is just a great big joke'
So—when I need some thinking done, I'll call on country folk.

Jaspeh—There's that man who's always giving women something to talk about.
Man—A scandalmonger, eh?
Jasper—No, a surgeon.

One advantage of being in the radio business would be that folks couldn't lend your broadcast to a neighbor after they were through with it.

John—Why were you shedding tears at the movies last night?
Shirley—Because it was a moving picture.

Some Husbands Are Like That:
"According to the complaints, Mrs. Blair says her husband started amusing her three days after they were married."—Los Angeles, California, Examiner.

The Usual Way!

Strangely sweet your promise, solemn as a vow,
Storming the emotions as before, and now
Breathlessly believing with my heart on fire,
But knowing from experience you're the darndest liar!

Judge—Did you say that the man was shot in the woods, Doctor?
Doctor—No, I said he was shot in the lumbar region.

A wife is a mighty fine companion when she's quietly hatching plans for a long and very expensive vacation.

Boarder — By the way, landlady, did you find a $5 bill on the floor in my room this morning?
Landlady—Yes. Thank you very much. I have credited on your account.

The Last Warning

Avoid the sun's persistent ray, boil everything you drink,
Be careful of the things you say, and e'en of what you think;
Be statuesquely grave and still, maintain a poise sublime,
And there's a prospect that you will survive the summer time.

Man—Friend, do you believe in ghosts?
Friend—No sir! I woke up one night and saw one in my room. I asked him what he wanted and he said: "Nothing!" Next morning I found he had stole my best pants, my watch and purse. Since then I don't believe in ghosts. They're not reliable.

Repeat the following sentence quickly:
Face the North, East is right;
Face the West, South is left.
Face the South, West is right;
Face the East, North is left.

If his wife doesn't let him help run things he can brag that he leaves all such trifles to his wife.

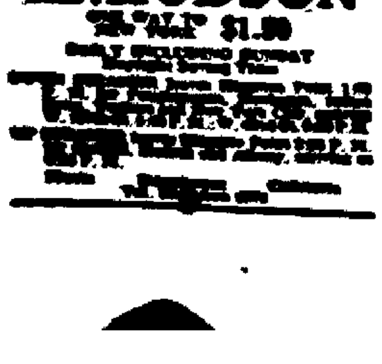

Housewife—Look here, my man, why do you always come to my house to beg?
Tramp—Doctor's orders, madam.
Housewife —Doctor's orders?
Tramp—He told me that when I found food that agreed with me I should stick to it.

A lot of folks are already acquiring a lot of summer scenery, and they still owe for the duds they got last fall. Pay up and make business good.

"Quite right," says their hostess wiping her eyes;
"I confess your behavior is SUCH a surprise;
I bid you be WELCOME, and ask you to DINE—
And what do you do but weep and repine?"

Stone Ridge, June 8.—Miss Charlotte Becker and Lansing Hunt were Sunday guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. DeForest Bishop.

The proceeds will be used for pastor's salary and general expenses of the church. A most appetizing menu has been planned: Virginia baked ham, chicken patties, biscuit and butter, creamed potatoes, green beans, baked beans, combination salad, potato salad, deviled eggs, potcheese, cake, strawberries, fruit cup, ice cream, coffee and iced tea. Only those who attended former suppers of this kind realize how much food a little money buys at a cafeteria supper.

TIPS ON CONTRACT

By TOM O'NEIL

Bunched Trumps.

When an adversary's trumps cannot all be captured the road to success with a contract sometimes lies in permitting the defender to ruff while the declarer discards. In such a situation care may be necessary in the choice of a discard.

Witness this hand, played by Stuart Churchill, whose tenor voice is known on the air and whose hobby is bridge:

Churchill, sitting South, contracted for six hearts. When he dropped the queen of hearts he realized that East must make a trump trick. The problem was how to prevent the defense from taking a second trick.

At a cursory glance it might seem to a novice that one spade from the South hand could be discarded on the ace of clubs North and another on a diamond North. But any attempt to do that would result in East ruffing a diamond and shooting a spade back for the setting trick.

The bidding was:

South	West	North	East
1H	P	2C	P
3H	P	4D	P
6H	P	P	DBL
RDBL	P	P	P

Notwithstanding lack of trump support shown by his partner, Churchill decided that his own trump strength plus the suits bid by North in which he had more or less of a fit warranted the slam bid.

The king of spades was opened and won with the ace. Three top hearts were played from the South hand, followed by the king of clubs and the ace of diamonds. A diamond was led to the king in the North hand. On the ace of clubs the last diamond was discarded South. That was the key play.

The queen of diamonds was led. East could ruff if he chose. If he did South would overruff and draw the last trump, then lead a low spade establishing North's jack.

East refused to ruff the diamond queen or the jack and South discarded two spades. East made a heart trick at the end.

Month Old Twins Come to College

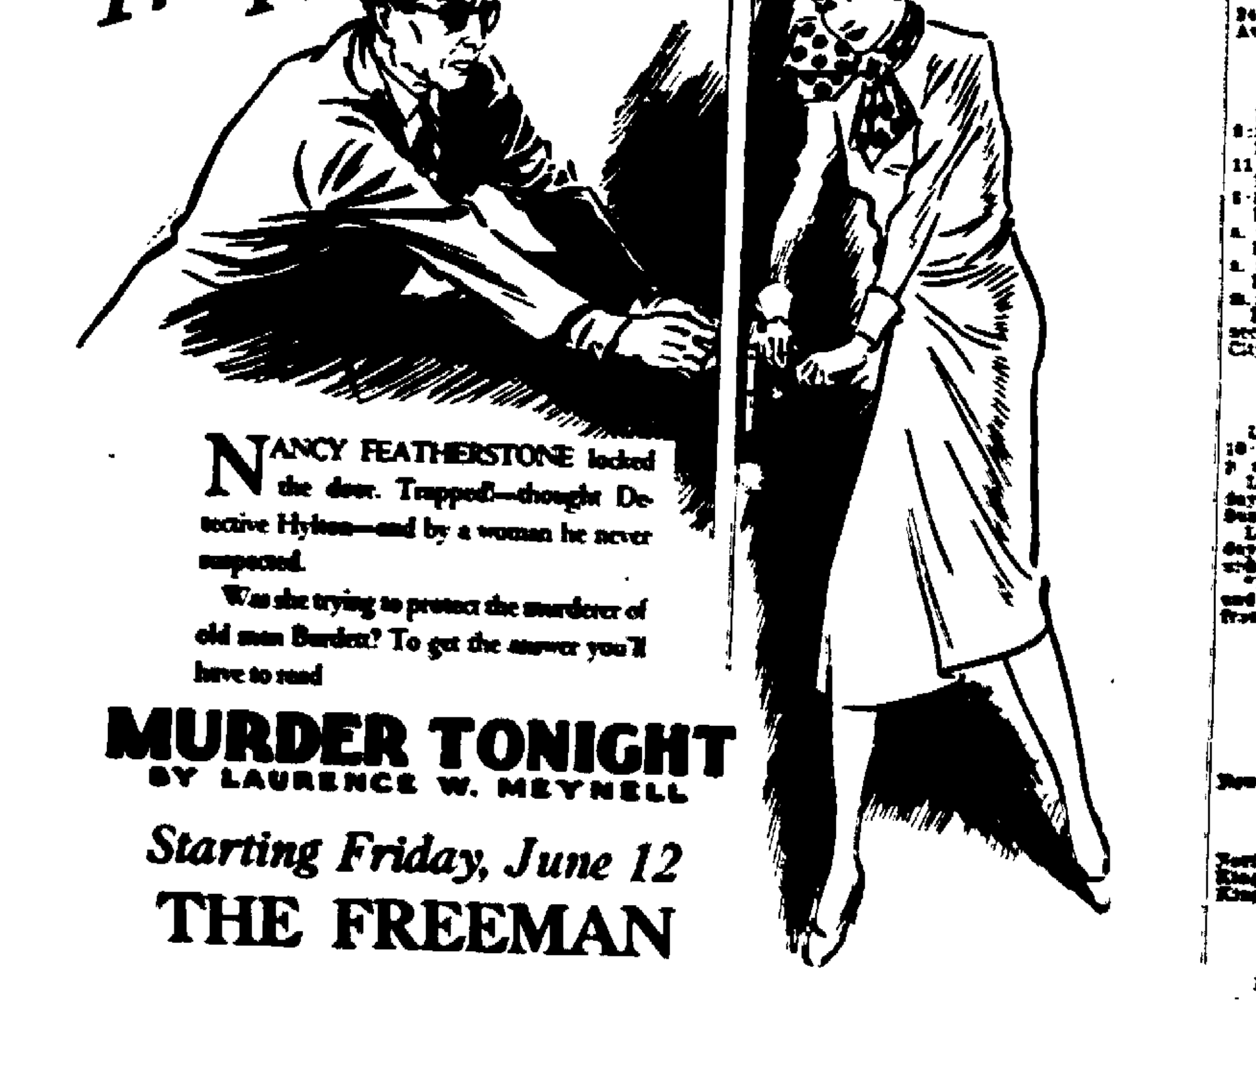

Ithaca, N. Y., June 9.—Twin girls, born April 21, have come to the New York state college of home economics for a year of care and training; and the very first night they broke a rule, sleeping right through a regular three-hour feeding, typical of babies of that age. They have now graduated to food every four hours, typical of more advanced babies.

The twins are Mary Alice and Rose Ann. Mary Alice is the elder by fifteen minutes, but weighed nearly a pound less at birth. Mary Alice now weighs seven pounds and fifteen ounces, and Rose Ann, seven pounds and sixteen ounces. Because their mother died at their birth, the father was glad to put them in the care of the college for a year of foster-mothering.

From now until October, the twins will live in the college's nutrition apartment and will be under the care of Mildred Hall, a graduate student who is interested in a study of energy in children.

In October, Mary Alice and Rose Ann will move to the two homemaking apartments in the college where they will be temporarily "adopted" by home economics students. They have the title of "practice-house babies," and will help to give students first-hand knowledge of the care of infants.

In the past eighteen years of practice babies, the student foster-mothers have kep them uniformly and continuously healthy and happy, although many of them were undernourished and not particularly happy when they arrived on the Cornell campus.

SHOKAN

Shokan, June 8.—Mr. and Mrs. James A. Hartvig and children, are at their summer home on the north boulevard for the season. Their place, adjoining that of Dr. Harry P. VanWagenen of Kingston, formerly was the property of Mr. and Mrs. Will Longyear, now residents of Kingston.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Baylis of Peekskill were week-end guests at the home of Mrs. Margaret Rainey.

Burtis Wheat left town Sunday for New York where he has employment with his truck. Mr. Wheat while at home for a few days last week erected a picket fence around the lawn of his mountain valley cottage. This is probably the only fence of its kind for miles along Route 28. Years ago, in the old village they were quite common, lending a homey air to homes and incidentally protecting the lawn from the cattle which drovers used to bring down the valley from Delaware county to the river, sometimes 75 or 100 head in a drove.

Leonard Plass, who for a time was employed at Carleson's Mountain Rest, now has a position with Chester Lyons' garage in Ashokan.

Spending two weeks at the William Windrum cottage are the following Brooklyn people: Mrs. Everhart, Fred Eberhart and W. Whalen.

The Lydman family of Acorn Hill were callers in the village center Sunday. The Lydmans, who operate a large boarding house in the southern Olive neighborhood, are relatives of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Matland, summer residents of Shokan.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Secor of Kingston spent Sunday at their summer home on a part of the family holdings here.

Sylvester Wells and family have removed from Mrs. Sarah Elmendorf's bungalow on the state road to the Oakes farm at Boiceville where Mr. Wells has been employed for the last year.

There was a heavy travel on the reservoir boulevards late Sunday afternoon. It was noted that a large percentage of the motorists used the dividing weir route, traveling to or from Kingston on Route 28. It was also observed at the corner that drivers are more sign-conscious than in other years, practically every one of the cars coming up from the reservoir stopping in obedience to the through traffice warning at the junction of the tow roads. Sunday traffic is only middling heavy until about 3 o'clock in the afternoon when the cars increase in number up to 5 o'clock. Not every one has a new model as week day travel would seem to indicate; there are apparently hundreds of thrifty families still worrying along with the same old bus.

John Ingalls of Brooklyn spent the week-end at the family country home on the state road.

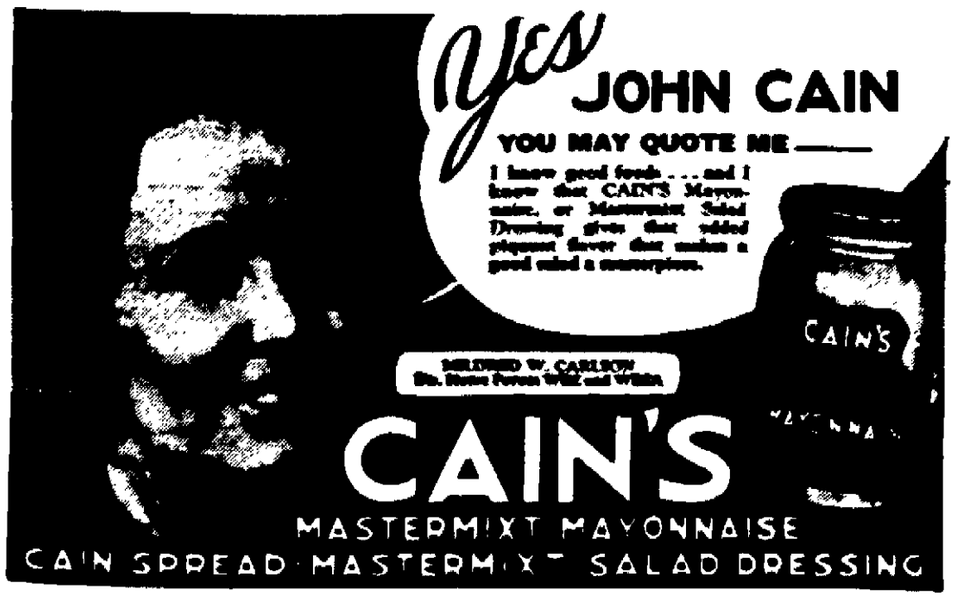

Members of the Clement Chase family are at their place on Winchell Mountain.

MODES OF THE MOMENT

The activity of the game is well considered by designers in fashioning new costumes for outdoor sports. They are cut for comfort and action as well as style.

While many novelty cotton fabrics are used for sport togs, pique and linen are most favored this season. They come in many interesting color combinations as well as smart all-white effects.

Most costumes include a jacket of some kind. Some are full length coats while others are brief jackets just long enough to cover the low sun back of the dress.

The tennis outfit shown above uses fine birds-eye pique in navy pin dot for the dress and in red for the jacket. The frock has a high front neckline, with tiny white buttons on the bodice, a daringly low cut sunback and a full, gored skirt.

The red fitted jacket is brief and also fastens with tiny white buttons. It has two simulated pockets, short sleeves and an elastic treatment at back waistline to make it fit snugly. This costume is equally effective in a black and red combination.

WRITING GOOD LETTERS

Stuck for words—and so anxious to have that letter to Jack sound just right!

Oh, sail right in, Dorothy! No stalling around with "I ought to have written sooner," or "I don't know what you think of me for not writing," or "We are all well, how are you?"

Make a simple, direct start:

"Dear Jack,

"There's a grand thunder shower going on, and our street has been enjoying the show. This included watching dear old Grandpa Harris tying an umbrella to the roof of the little coop where the hen and chicks live, and seeing the five Adams children bouncing on the lawn in their bathing-suits.

"I hope, now you have that new car, you'll be driving back to the home town as often as you can. . . ." and so on.

No formal, stiff phrasing. Just the language of pleasant, every-day speech. Correct salutation. No cheap errors such as "Dear friend," or "Friend Jack" or "Hi, old kid." She will sign it "Sincerely yours," "Cordially yours," or "All kinds of cheery greetings from the old crowd."

These questions of vocabulary, phrasing, tone, tact, etiquette, good style for different kinds of letters—they're all explained in our 40-page booklet, HOW TO WRITE LETTERS FOR ALL OCCASIONS. Sample letters. Entertaining suggestions. A lifesaver to the pen-shy.

Send 15c for our booklet, HOW TO WRITE LETTERS FOR ALL OCCASIONS, to Kingston Daily Freeman, Home Institute, 109 West 19th street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS and the NAME of booklet.

Bridges Linked To Vice Presidency

Cleveland, June 9 (AP).—Governor H. Styles Bridges of New Hampshire was added today to the growing list of Republican vice-presidential possibilities.

Clarence V. Beck, Kansas attorney general, said he had approached the 38-year old New Englander and found him receptive.

Whether this move from the Landon camp meant the Kansas lead decided upon an eastern running mate was a subject of considerable speculation. Other of Landon's friends are known to favor an all-western ticket.

Only two active campaigns for the vice-presidential nomination were being waged yesterday. Friends of Col. Arthur W. Little of New York and J. Leonard Replogle of Palm Beach, Fla., opened headquarters for their candidates.

New Jersey's delegates decided last night to nominate Walter E. Edge, former United States senator from that state, for vice-president.

Still prominently mentioned also were Representative Wadsworth of New York, Senator Hastings of Delaware and Senator Steiwer of Oregon.

Steiwer's keynote address tonight was looked upon as one factor possibly determining whether he would be available.

Discussion of George N. Peek, former AAA administrator, as a draftman of one of the numerous farm planks was accompanied by a suggestion of Representative Treadway of Massachusetts that the farm economist might be vice-presidential material.

Medal—or Death

There used to exist in the Austrian army a medal given only to officers who, for some good reason, disobeyed a higher command on the field of battle—and succeeded. But if he failed, instead of a medal, he was shot.

Republicans Pin on Badges Until Lapels Sag, Then Convene

Cleveland, June 9 (AP).—Eyes aglint with great expectations, Republicans pinned on badges until their lapels sagged and then trooped to the big hall today to set up their convention machinery.

The flag of every state was in its place as the great doors swung open to receive the throng sporting Landon sunflowers, star-spangled Knox emblems, Borah and Vandenberg buttons—and all the rest.

Crammed Hotels, rooming houses and Lake Erie boats serving as hostelries emptied as the crowds surged on 15,500 waiting seats.

A strange mixture of mardi gras mood and serious pondering over statecraft had marked the pre-convention days. In smoke-hazy hotel lobbies and bars, crowds jostled each other gaily, and slapped backs, while behind scenes other delegates worked grimly away on crucial problems.

There haven't been enough bands to suit old timers. Until this morning there had been but one, loaned by the Great Lakes Exposition to ride the Landon band wagon. It tootled "Oh Suzanna" a few times and then disappeared.

Missing were the singing clubs too of other years, equipped with vigorous lungs and campaign parodies of popular songs, trooping from hotel to hotel to peddle their musical wares.

But the celebrity hunters got one real treat last night. Two of the convention's top personalities, stepped off an elevator and strolled arm-in-arm through the crowds and the quick whispers of "look, look—its Borah and Vandenberg."

The crowds enjoyed photographers' vain efforts to get Ogden Mills and Dr. F. E. Townsend, the pension man, to pose together like long lost brothers, and gasped when Peggy Ann Landon, demure daughter of the Kansas candidate, arrived on the scene.

Red, white and blue bunting fluttered today from many buildings, especially in Cleveland's public square, near the convention hall. Shop windows sported elephants of every hue.

Controversy Over Platform Today

bad toothache, which suddenly reasserts itself in the midst of an exciting party. It has taken a great deal of the joy out of the trip to Cleveland.

There had been a lot of talk beforehand about candidates. Some sort of contest was expected, but after all these presidential rivalries usually are good, clean fun. It would all straighten out, and then the chosen leader could go ahead lambasting the Democrats for what they had been doing at Washington.

The fine thing about the pre-convention campaign, many people said, was that the old Conservative-Liberal row, which had caused so much grief in the past, was not figuring greatly. Some of the extreme Left-Wingers might split away, but there was high hope that the man selected would, in the main, have sufficient appeal to keep the ancient feud submerged.

Some such thing might have happened, except for the necessity of drafting a platform. But the process of putting into words what the Republican party stands for in 1936 has turned out to be no simple matter. It has developed that the old factions still exist, that several new ones have appeared, and that all of them, old and new, are inclined to be rather set in their ways.

It can be said on behalf of the political astuteness of various of the Landon lieutenants that they realized all the time that a platform had to be written. They got groups together at Kansas City and elsewhere, and whittled out some tentative planks. At the same time, a number of gentlemen in the east were whittling, too.

But when the time came, a few days ago, to fit the various pieces of the structure together, it was found that different groups had been working with entirely different sets of specifications. A considerable eastern bloc came to Cleveland urging a reaffirmation of the old Republican faith. Some of the Kansans came talking of a complete rebirth of the party, and they had planks in their pockets which gave the easterners some nasty moments.

It would be assuming a great deal to say that the party is back where it was a quarter of a century ago, when it split at Chicago over economic issues. The situation has reached no such stage, as yet. That the shooting pains of the lingering malady are being felt today in Cleveland, however, there can be no shadow of a doubt.

The toothache is back, but practiced hands are ministering to it. In the last quarter of a century, facing this situation over and over again, the Republicans have learned many lessons about compromise. The next thirty-six hours should show whether they can succeed again in easing the pain.

Longworthy Selected By Landon Leaders

Convention Hall, Cleveland, June 9 (AP)—Herman Longworthy, of Kansas City, was selected today by Landon leaders at the Republican National Convention as their choice for head of the all-important Resolutions Committee which drafts the platform.

Longworthy has been participating in the preliminary conferences of Landon forces on the platform with William Allen White, the Kansas members of the Resolutions Committee, and others.

Supporters of Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas, decided to push Longworthy for the post after long negotiations with former Senator John Thomas of Idaho, had collapsed.

G.O.P. Convention Opens At Cleveland

might introduce factors which now are only speculative.

Past Party Glories.

The ceremonies this morning evoked memories of past party glories. It was on the same floor that Calvin Coolidge swept to his 1924 nomination.

By virtue of his chairmanship of the national committee Henry P. Fletcher of Pennsylvania had the presiding role.

Kansas delegates had places right up in front. Wooden standards seven feet tall marked the place of each delegation on a plan roughly resembling the locations of the state on the map. Maine had the first row on the "Atlantic" side, Washington on the Pacific. Iowa, Minnesota and Kansas shared the middle front.

The only remaining business, before returning to the endless conferences in the hotels up the street, was the reading of the convention call, the roll call, election of temporary officers and selections of committees. The committees will deal with credentials disputes of delegates, rules and permanent organization, as well as the platform.

A wide array of contradictory platform plank suggestions forecast that the major arguments in the resolutions committee would be over money and proposals by some Landon supporters for a constitutional amendment to empower states to fix minimum wages.

Factions among the Landon supporters, it appeared, were fearful lest the Democratic convention a fortnight hence may pick up the minimum wage-constitutional question and capitalize by advocating an amendment to offset the recent 5-4 Supreme Court decision against the New York state law. But Borah and Senator Vandenberg of Michigan insisted it would be premature and unnecessary to come out for an amendment now.

Borah told a crowded press conference that minimum wages could be taken care of under the constitution as it stands. He was more intent that there be an unequivocal plank against monopoly, and none for return to the "old, rigid gold standard," he demanded that Landon state his position. An assertion by him that Landonites had entrusted the writing of a monetary plank to advocates of the gold standard was denied by John Hamilton, Landon manager.

Lesser disputes were heading up around the reciprocal tariff, federal relief and other Roosevelt policies. All were to be brought to the convention floor after the Hoover speech.

Vice presidential talk bobbed up again with the revelation that Attorney General C. V. Beck of Kansas, of the Landon outfit, had sounded out Governor H. Styles Bridges of New Hampshire.

Only 38 years old, Bridges was said to be receptive, even if it meant giving up running for the Senate.

Wadsworth Idea Drops

The New York delegation apparently dropped the idea of putting up James W. Wadsworth for second place. New Jersey will nominate Walter Edge, the former senator.

What Steiwer says might be indicative of how the winds blow on some platform matters. The keynoter never has been classed as a "die-hard" against all the New Deal.

Recently he has advocated a balanced budget and opposed delegation of wide powers to the President. He voted for NRA, AAA and the Wagner labor act; but opposed the utility holding companies bill and the Guffey coal bill.

After his speech and brief miscellaneous business, the convention will adjourn until another session at 11 a. m. tomorrow. The credentials committee will report on a few contests between delegates and the convention will be asked to decide them.

Representative Bertrand Snell, of New York, is expected then to be installed as permanent chairman.

Born on an Oregon ranch he spent his boyhood at farm chores, coyote chasing, study and playing the clarinet.

He was schooled at Oregon agricultural College and the University of of Oregon, where he led a band, played football and became president of the student body.

After college he studied law in Portland, then moved to Pendleton and entered politics as a deputy district attorney.

Although married in 1911 and elected state senator in 1916, Steiwer resigned, and volunteered for army service in 1917 before draft was put into effect.

He entered national politics in 1926 through election to the senate on a platform the first plank of which was—"strict attention to public business and a square deal to all men."

At 52, the senator is a grandfather, an ardent fisherman and a great walker.

Thayer Ceremonies.

Buffalo, N. Y., June 9 (AP)—Knights Templar of New York state today prepared to install their new grand commander, Chauncey C. Thayer, of Gloversville, and close their 123rd annual conclave. Thayer, mayor of the Glove City, was moved up from deputy grand commander at the annual election of the grand commandery last night. He succeeds Everett R. Tomlinson, of Batavia.

Cabinet Changes.

Rome, June 9 (AP).—Premier Mussolini shook up his cabinet again today, changing four department heads and accepting the resignation of Fulvio Suvich, undersecretary of state for foreign affairs.

N. Y. DELEGATES IN CLEVELAND

Eaton, state chairman, and Col. Lafayette Gleason, secretary of the convention, are shown making arrangements to confer with other members of the delegation. (Associated Press Photo)

Cleveland, O., June 9 (AP)—New York's 98 uninstructed delegates to the Republiacn National Convention gave further thought today to presidetial timber before making definite committments, despite reassertions by some leaders that Governor Alf M. Landon of Kansas would receive at least 70 votes on the first ballot.

In a surprise move at a caucus on the eve of the convention opening, the largest state bloc voted to postpone a poll until late tomorrow.

J. Russel Sprague, Nassau county chairman and delegation head, explained the action was taken to provide "greater time for deliberation."

He emphatically denied that the state's action was any attempt to "stop Landon."

Landon-for-president followers reported their lines were holding firm, with 36 delegates openly declared for the Kansas governor and many more expected to follow before the balloting begins on Thursday.

If this sentiment continued, one leader said, New York, well down on the roll call, might be in the position to push Landon over to 501 mark necessary for nomination.

Efforts to have the delegation vote as a unit for Frank E. Gannett, Rochester publisher, failed, although it was considered possible that at least a dozen votes would be cast for him on the first ballot.

The New York camp continued to discuss the defeat of Representative James J. Wadsworth and Ogden L. Mills, former secretary of the treasury for membership on the resolutions, or platform, committee.

The delegates at their caucus elected Representative John Taber of Auburn, N. Y., to the post, over Wadsworth and Mills.

At the same time, the delegates re-elected Charles D. Hilles and Mrs. Ruth B. Pratt as national committeemen over the protests of twelve members.

Edwin F. Jaeckle, Erie county chairman, had led a fight to oust the veteran Hilles, claiming he is "harmful to the party."

Despite Hilles' re-election, Jaeckle said "he has been reduced from an all-powerful party boss to a mere figure-head."

"It is widely conceded he is on the way to political oblivion," the Erie county leader asserted. "The fight to purge the party of the Hilles type of leadership, in name as well as in fact, will continue, and it will succeed."

New York Delegates Favoring Amendment

Cleveland, O., June 9 (AP)—New York's delegates to the Republican National Convention worked today to take the lead in a move to have the party go on record for a constitutional amendment to permit state legislation on minimum wages.

They took the view that the New York bloc should have a hand in any such movement, inasmuch as the minimum wage law for women recently invalidated by the Supreme Court was enacted in the Empire State in 1933.

Rep. John Taber of Auburn, N. Y., said immediately after his election as the state's representative on the resolution committee that he planned to give the subject "careful consideration."

Rep. James J. Wadsworth of Geneseo, N. Y., who sought the resolution committee post, was sympathetic, even though he said he was not a strong believer in minimum wage legislation.

Strong support for a plank advocating a constitutional amendment on the minimum wage question has come from the camp of Governor Alf M. Landon of Kansas, for whom 36 New York delegates already have declared. Former President Hoover likewise expressed sympathy with the proposal.

Omaha Deluged

Omaha, June 9 (AP)—More than a half inch of rain deluged Omaha in a half hour today. At the height of the storm a 60 mile wind swept the city, tearing down several electric power wires and wrecking a few house roofs. No injuries were reported.

Lehman Vacation

Albany, N. Y., June 9 (AP)—Governor Lehman departed today for a 10 days or two weeks vacation in White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., accompanied by Mrs. Lehman and their three children, Peter, John and Hilda Jane.

NEW YORK HIGHLIGHTS

Cleveland, June 9 (AP).—Three men prominently mentioned by convention visitors for the Republican gubernatoral nomination in New York this fall are State Senator George R. Fearon, Mayor Rolland B. Marvin of Syracuse and Supreme Court Justice William F. Bleakley of Yonkers.

Two former Republican candidates for Governor of New York, Colonel Theodore Roosevelt and William J. ("Wild Bill") Donovan, also are here.

Shortly before they were re-elected for another four-year term, National Committeeman Charles D. Hilles and National Committeewoman Ruth Baker Pratt gave a dinner last night for the 180 delegates and alternates from New York.

Including delegates and alternates, there are approximately 590 New Yorkers at the convention.

One of the busiest men here is Colonel Lafayette B. Gleason who, in addition to being secretary of the New York state committee, is secretary of the national convention.

Among the first arrivals on the platform when the convention opened was Ogden Mills, secretary of the treasury in the Hoover administration and long active in New York politics.

"Endangering Liberties"

Rochester, N. Y., June 9 (AP)—A warning that "the spirit of Fascism" is endangering "liberties for which the martyrs died" was placed before the closing session of the General Synod of the Reformed Church of America today by the permanent committee on social welfare. Reporting to the 130th annual meeting of the synod the committee said that "in freedom of speech and tolerance we are tending back to the middle ages."

Landon Advocates End of Monopoly's Tyranny

Topeka, Kas., June 9 (AP) Gov Alf M. Landon advocated the overthrowing of "the tyranny of monopoly" and the resisting of "economic dictatorship" as he returned from his alma mater to the executive mansion today to follow the Republican convention which may nominate him for the presidency.

The governor doffed the cap and gown he wore at the University of Kansas commencement and settled down to listen to broadcasts from Cleveland. He was in touch, too, with his supporters by telephone but he refrained from any public comment on the convention.

In his address last night the Kansan struck specifically at monopolies—an attack which also has been made by another contender for the Republican nomination, Senator Borah of Idaho.

"This road (ahead)", he said in pointing a path for the graduates, "as I have said before and as I shall continue to say because I firmly believe it, avoids the tyranny of monopoly and economic dictatorship on one hand and the bondage of bureaucracy on the other."

He said the graduates would have to decide between two views, one which "presupposes we have reached the end of the road in our national developments," and the other "held by those who insist that we have no more reached a stationary stage now than we had in the '90's."

Landon followed his first reference to monopoly and dictatorship with another specific thrust:

"We, the people, must overthrow the tyranny of monopoly and economics dictatorship, in all fields of honorable endeavor, if we are to escape the shackles of bureaucracy in governmental life, and only by overthrowing the one and resisting the other shall we be able to open again and keep open the gate of equal opportunity now and in the years to come."

Peggy Ann Landon Comes to Cleveland

Cleveland, June 9 (AP)—Nineteen-year-old Peggy Ann Landon has come to town—and no movie star ever received a more hysterical welcome.

Enthusiastic crowds shouted and swirled about the daughter of Governor Alf M. Landon when she arrived in the great, marble concourse of the railroad terminal last night.

Secretaries from Landon headquarters seized the little figure in the grey tweed suit and scarlet blouse firmly by the elbows, and propelled her through the mob scene.

She kept remarkable poise, and made a triumphal entry into the hotel ball-room where the Landon headquarters are, saying pretty but correct nothing to the smiling workers for her father's nomination.

She and her grandfather, John Landon are the only members of the governor's family at the convention.

"God Control" Is Aim Of Oxford Movement

New York, June 9. (AP).—The Oxford group, at the end of its first national assembly in America, will try through its founder, Dr. Frank N. D. Buchman, to establish "God-control" in the Cleveland Republican convention.

Dr. Buchman said he would go to Cleveland tonight and would seek to "change" politicians in attendance there.

The group's international "soul-changing team" disbanded after appearing before about 3,000 persons last night at the Metropolitan Opera House to render testimony on how "God-control" had altered their lives.

This gathering followed a 10-day national assembly at Stockbridge, Mass.

"The God-controlled are the sane people in an insane world," Dr. Buchman said. "God-controlled people have the answer anywhere."

6 Named to Make Seconding Speeches

Cleveland, June 9 (AP)—John M. Hamilton, campaign manager for Alf M. Landon, today named four men and two women who will make seconding speeches after the Kansas governor has been nominated for the Republican presidential candidacy.

Hamilton said these would second the nomination Gaspar G. Bacon of Massachusetts, Mrs. Corrine R. Alsop, of Connecticut; Charles J. Moynihan, of Colorado, Henry Depping, of Missouri; Mrs. Ruth McCormick Simms, of New Mexico, and Perry W. Howard, negro, of Mississippi.

Hamilton, who will make the nominating address, said there had been "no discussions of any plans for Governor Landon to come to Cleveland," and that original plans for Landon to remain at Topeka were unchanged.

Still declining to make an exact prediction of the Landon strength, Hamilton said the first ballot "may not represent all of our strength."

Birth Rise Predicted

Albany, N. Y., June 9 (AP)—Dr. J. V. Deporte of the State Health Department predicted today that "in all probability" there would be a slight rise soon in the birth rate, which at 13.4 per 1,000 population was the lowest ever recorded for April. "The April birth rate merely reflected a downward tendency that has been in evidence since 1917," Dr. Deporte, director of the division of vital statistics, explained.

Sulky And Hines Get Jail Sentences

Frank Sulky, 26, of Glasco and William Hines, 28, of Malden were given jail sentences this morning in County Court by County Judge Frederick G. Traver when the burglary indictments against the two were moved by District Attorney Cleon B. Murray. A. J. Cook appeared for the two and after the trial of the indictment had been moved Sulky and Hines changed their plea of not guilty to guilty of unlawful entry. They were charged with having entered the Raymond Diaz bungalow in the town of Saugerties.

The pleas were accepted by the court and Hines was sentenced to a year in the county jail. Sulky, who is married, and who it was stated was not the instigator of the crime, was given an eight months sentence in jail.

The David Myerhoff and Ralph Wood indictments were held until June 15 and the arson indictments against Frank Brayton, John Knor and Isador Paradies were put over the term pending decision of a motion in supreme court. The charge grows out of the burning of the Knor property on the Saugerties road.

Friday morning counsel in the various criminal actions which have not been disposed of will be in court and the entire calendar will be called for final disposition. Court recessed until 2 o'clock at which time additional cases will be called.

An extra panel of jurors will probably be drawn.

Last week the claim of the Centerville M. E. Church was disposed of by agreement as to the amount of settlement and formal proof was taken. One of the Snyder claims was also settled by the taking of formal testimony and hearings were then held in two other claims of Albert Snyder, one involved the residence property and a second lands adjoining the residence property. George F. Kaufman appeared for claimants. Roscoe V. Elsworth, county attorney, appeared for the county board of supervisors.

Elwyn to Return Soon to Begin Work On Maverick Plays

Woodstock, June 9.—Robert Elwyn, managing director at the Maverick Theatre for the third consecutive season, will return from his South Carolina sojourn the week-end of June 14. Mr. Elwyn was haled to the Sub-Dixie territory for a production of "The Mollusc," New York success of a few seasons ago. The direction of the play plus the enacting of a leading part, will keep him busy until Maverick duties bring him northward. The season will open with A. N. Behrman's "Biography," on June 25 to 28, the cast to be announced.

A new addition to the company, Robin Batcheller, versatile and widely experienced New York actor, has been made. Mr. Batcheller is noted for his ability to portray, with deftness and brilliance, a wide range of parts. He will stay for the summer at Mrs. Charles Hasbrouck's.

Of further and particular interest to Maverick Theatre patrons will be the new personalities, Kathryn Dutcher, Phyllis Ellerman, Duane MacKinney and Walter Pick.

The members of the company are expected to filter into Woodstock inns, hotels, and cottages from now until rehearsals begin on June 16.

Fred Little, master in the arts of stage setting and lighting, will head the staff at the Maverick.

Under the personal supervision of Frank Rothe, the well-known and favorite actor who has been affiliated at the Maverick since Mr. Elwyn's inception there, an interesting and much enlarged program has been arranged for the 1936 season. However, Mr. Rothe maintains that his experiences while so doing, have not inspired him to abandon acting for the career of an advertising man.

Flower Boxes for The TB Hospital

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the Ulster County Tuberculosis Hospital are receiving donations for flower boxes to be filled in front of each porch in a manner in which the patients may view the flowers either from their bed inside or from the screened porch opening from their rooms.

The men patients have made the metal boxes (to contain the flowers) in their occupational therapy classes and one friend of the hospital asked for the privilege of keeping a box filled in memory of one of our great helpers in preventive tuberculosis work. It may be that other flower lovers may enjoy the thought of making it possible to give the shutins the opportunity to see beautiful flowers which mean even more to the ones who cannot get outside to view them at this time of year in the lovely gardens in our city.

The Auxiliary decided in order to have uniformity of color schemes etc., it would be better to accept money rather than plantings and therefore anyone desiring to contribute may get in touch with the president of the Ladies' Auxiliary, Mrs. Frederic W. Holcomb, 188 Fair street.

Monarchist Plot Smashed in Spain

Madrid, June 9 (AP)—Smashing of a monarchist plot and seizure of scores of civil guard uniforms was announced late today by a high official charged with direction of Spanish security.

His statement ran directly counter to earlier police reports which stated 400 uniforms had been seized at the Madrid headquarters of the syndicalists, who have been trying to effect a general strike in the capital.

The official declared the uniforms, numbering one hundred, actually had been seized in the building of a transport agency. The agency is located near the syndicalist headquarters, leading to confusion in early reports.

A number of monarchist arrests are expected, the official added.

(Some weeks ago there were reports from the French Riviera that former King Alfonso XIII of Spain and his son, Prince Juan, the heir-presumptive, would seek to take advantage of the strikes and political disorders which have plagued Spain since a Leftist government was given power in February elections.)

Police believed the plotters planned to disguise themselves in the uniforms to confuse bona fide police forces and produce a panic.

Police said today's raid had crushed the movement and official government quarters asserted the movement had little foundation.

6 Men Are Held For Seizing Penland

Detroit, June 9 (AP)—Six men accused of Black Legion night riding activities were ordered held today for trial on charges of "seizing and confining" Robert Penland, steel worker who was abducted and "tried" by a group of masked men last October 5.

Penland related at the examination of the six that he was seized by three of them and taken before a meeting at which he was accused of "disobeying orders and not attending meetings," but he said he was not flogged.

Frederick A. Gulley, identified by Penland as the man who lured him into the automobile in which he was taken to the meeting, contradicted Penland's testimony on that point, however. He testified today that Penland was lashed with a blacksnake whip.

In addition to Gulley, those ordered held for trial are Thomas F. Cox and Earl Angstadt, who Penland said forced him to get into the car; Charles King, former Ecorse village councilman; Harold Lawrence, also of Ecorse; and Wilbur Robinson, suspended Detroit street railways employe, who Penland testified were present at his "trial."

Bus Lines Apply To Change Routes

others if they really were so concerned about the change in the terminal.

"And, about the hazards, I think that the action of the No. 7 School Parent Teacher Association truly reflects why the terminal should be removed to North Front street."

Hyman Aduchefsky in his talk said he could disprove that there hadn't been an accident on Crown street near the terminal. He cited several cases where automobiles and buses were involved, one concerning the safety of a woman pushing a baby carriage, another where the terminal was crowded and the buses had to use the street to turn.

"At our terminal we have lots of room," said Aduchefsky. "And, if necessary, we can even enlarge it."

He denied knowledge of any accidents that occurred near the new proposed site lately.

"About shoppers carrying bundles," said the North Front street bus terminal man, "What about folks who shop in the Bull Market? I saw one old gentleman carrying more bundles than any one of us in this room would carry and he was hustling from the market to the old terminal."

Friday's meeting will determine indirectly whether the terminal will go to North Front street, when the aldermen vote on the petitions for change of routes.

Missionaries in Hawaii

The first missionaries to Hawaii had as their first task the problem of teaching natives the why and wherefore of clothing the body. A Hawaiian queen of six feet and ample girth was given a roll of cloth, which she unwound on the ground, lay down upon it and rolled over and over, thus draping it around herself, to her entire satisfaction. When the ceremony for which she had dressed was over, she again lay down and unwound herself.

HOLLYWOOD SIGHTS and SOUNDS

By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—Mrs. Walker E Withers, Jane's mother, is shy of cameras but she broke into the movies the other day by accident—Jane's accident.

Jane was to slide down a long, high stair railing for a scene in "Burlesque." Jane refused a double—sliding down banisters is too much fun anyway. But the rail on was not slick enough. They waxed it twice.

Jane thought some talcum would help matters, and she herself sprinkled it on generously She got results, and speed When they took the scene Jane was thrown at the curve in the rail Her head struck, thump, on the floor as her heels went flying

Mrs Withers was there before the camera stopped So was everyone else on the set. Half an hour later, when the others still were jittery, Jane was practicing a dance step

Moore Comes Back

Victor Moore, the comedian, is working in "The Astaire-Rogers "Never Gonna Dance." Moore once was a star in silent pictures He remembers the day that Jesse Lasky, then his boss, came and told him there was a nice, promising young actor on the lot who would be given featured billing if Moore whose contract called for such billing, would consent.

Moore agreed, and Thomas Meighan got his first boost to stardom Later Moore played in support of Meighan the star. But the pendulum now has swung the other way again—Moore has greater fame than ever, Meighan is virtually retired.

"d) Operator: 'Will you dial the number again please?'

"e) 'I did dial the number but I did not get a reply'

"f) Operator: 'One moment please. I will try to get it for you.'

"g) There was a wait of several minutes and then

"h) Operator: 'There is no such number, sir.'"

The work is only half finished, and over 40 tons of top had been delivered to the job and used The delay in the work and the appearance of the job, it was said, was due to the fact that the foreman named by the WPA to handle the job had never done street work in his life before, and used some of the topdressing that had been purchased to fill in the excavation

Today

Broadway: "13 Hours by Air." Great goings-on aboard a passenger plane en route from Newark to the coast take place during the eventful life of the feature film at the Broadway. Told in the "Grand Hotel" manner, it brings the lives of the passengers and pilots into play with one another and as the giant plane drones westward, the audience learns that a sensational jewel robbery took place shortly before the plane took to the air and the finger of suspicion points at the blonde girl riding in the plane. Excitement mounts rapidly from then on with murder, storms and a few romantic interludes thrown in for good measure. Good dialogue and smooth direction all help to make this play a melodramatic entertainment feature to see and enjoy. Fred MacMurray, Joan Bennett, Binnie Barnes, Brian Donlevy, Zazu Pitts, Ruth Donnelly, Grace Bradley and John Howard are featured.

Kingston: "And So They Were Married" and "Two in Revolt". Melvyn Douglass, Mary Astor, Edith Fellows and Jackie Moran swat satirical wisecracks in the first film, the story of a young divorcee with a hatred for men and of a handsome widower who detests all women. Of course they meet under difficult circumstances and start calling each other names through most of the show. As the title suggests, the ending is in the best movie tradition. "Two in Revolt" is the colorful tale of a horse and a dog who are raised together on a Montana ranch. Together they do much for their master and there is plenty of shooting and fighting thrown in to make the picture interesting to western fans. John Arledge, Moroni Olsen, Louise Latimer, Harry Jans and Emmet Vogan are featured.

Orpheum: "The Prisoner of Shark Island". A tragic page in the history of the United States is brought to light in this historic tragedy of a doctor who is sent to an American penal island for alleged complicity in the slaying of Abraham Lincoln. Although completely innocent, the unfortunate doctor nearly dies in the horror of the prison. It's stark, realistic drama, a combination of history and fiction that becomes a powerful motion picture with Warner Baxter starred and supported by a brilliant cast. One of the year's better films.

Tomorrow

Broadway: "Till We Meet Again." Espionage and romance move hand in hand through the war drama. The story opens in 1914 in London where a beautiful actress and a famous matinee idol are in love with one another. Along comes the war and they are separated, he to do spy duty for Britain, she to work in the cause of Austria. To facilitate matters, he is officially announced dead so that he may more easily get behind the German lines but as chance works in these fateful matters, he runs into his sweetheart and the fireworks commence. The show is romantic and melodramatic with Herbert Marshall and Gertrude Michael doing the honors in the featured parts. Others in the cast include Lionel Atwill, Rod LaRoque, Julia Faye, Guy Bates Post and Vallejo Gantner. Robert Florey directed. Good summer entertainment.

Kingston: Same.

Orpheum: "Leavenworth Case" and "Criminal Within." Crime raises its ugly mug in both features at the Orpheum, the first a thriller with Donald Cook and Norman Foster and the other a study in crime and criminals with an all star cast of players.

Colonials and Brooklyn Giants Will Play Deciding Game Friday

The third and deciding game of the series between the Colonials and the Brooklyn Cubans will be staged Friday at the Athletic Field at 6 p. m. sharp. Lefty Hall will start for the Cubans in an effort to avenge Sunday's 13 to 12 defeat while the Colonials expect to use King Kong Shackett, who lasted only three innings Sunday.

Both clubs have important games this week. The Cubans meet the Hyde Park Robin Hoods tomorrow, Saugerties on Thursday and the Colonials Friday.

Sunday the Colonials meet Dutch Losee's Twilight League All Stars of Poughkeepsie at 3:15 sharp at the Pan Am diamond. Dutch Losee has rounded up a powerful squad and promises to hand the Colonials another setback. Earlier in the season, the Poughkeepsie club defeated the locals 4 to 2. Perc West's homer with two on decided the game.

Manager Johnson's Cuban outfit was greatly strengthened over the week-end and the Colonials were forced to rally furiously to win the game after trailing 10 to 0. Hall pitched airtight ball in the early part of the game but blew sky high in the sixth.

Poughkeepsie's lineup for Sunday includes Chick Wunderly, 1b; Perc West, 2b; O'Shea, 3b, and Stewart, ss. Gohl, Paul Becker and Dick Humiston are the outfielders. Lefty Dolfinger will pitch for the visitors opposed by Dewey Van Buren or Ted Freleigh.

Tagging Major League Bases

It was within the confines of their own Wrigley Field that the Chicago Cubs won the 1935 National League pennant, putting together the greater part of their famous 21-game winning streak. Now, in another home stand, the men of Charley Grimm have begun a brand new winning streak to join in with the Cardinals and Giants in the hot 1936 race.

The Cubs have won five straight on their home lot now and by trouncing the Phillies 3 to 0 yesterday as Larry French showed a return to last year's pitching form they placed themselves only a game and a half behind the second-place New York club and five behind the league-leading Cards. Even better, from the Chicago viewpoint, the Cubs and the Giants are all square in the losing column although the Giants have won three more.

The Cubs couldn't shake off the pesky Pittsburgh Pirates, the club they ousted from third place by a single percentage point a few days ago. While French was blanking the Phils with eight hits and whiffing six to chalk up his first complete game in his last seven starts, Cy Blanton was performing a similar feat to give the Pirates a 2 to 1 decision over the Dodgers.

Blanton, last year's freshman ace, hadn't been able to go the route previously this season. He granted only seven blows in a duel with Dutch Brandt but it took an error by Lonnie Frey with the bases loaded in the ninth to give the Bucs their winning run.

The Giants, meanwhile, took a 7 to 3 drubbing from the Cincinnati Reds, who blasted Harry Gumbert out with three runs in the fifth, then battered Frank Gabler for a four-run winning rally in the eighth as Paul Derringer hurled steady ball. The Cards and Bees had an off day.

In the American League the Yankees stretched their lead to three games with a 12 to 3 rout of the Browns while their nearest rivals, the Red Sox and Tigers, mauled each other in a double header. The Sox provided excellent support for Lefty Grove in the opener to win 6 to 3. They failed to provide the same backing for Fritz Ostermueller, however, and Detroit pounded out a six-run sixth inning and a 12 to 7 triumph.

The day's only other game saw the Athletics beat out the White Sox, 5 to 4, in the tenth when Pinky Higgins singled home the winning run after intentional passes by Johnny Whitehead had filled the bags. The Cleveland-Washington game was rained out.

Lou Gehrig and Joe DiMaggio, the Iron Man and the rookie of the Yankee slugging array, shared the honors in a 16-hit assault upon St Louis hurling. Each walloped a home run, Gehrig making his eleventh of the season, and a single, and in between Lou smacked a double and "De Mag" a triple.

Bonny's Back —By Pap

Sport Slants

The "Princeton mile" that has boosted the nation's youngest and most exclusive big time invitation track carnival into the limelight since its record-breaking inaugural in 1934 is a headliner in the 7-event program scheduled for old Palmer Nassau's Stadium on June 13.

Two of the individual headliners of both previous mile races and the man who used to be their reliable also-ran companion are in the select field this year at Princeton's third invitation meet.

These are: Glenn Cunningham, who electrified the cinder-path enthusiasts by running the mile in world record time of 4:06.7 at Princeton in 1934; William Robert Bonthron, former Princeton ace, who finished second in both 1934 and 1935, and Gene Venzke of Pennsylvania, who is no longer a certain victim of the formerly favored pair. Each member of this fleet trio holds at least one world record at the middle distances.

Another Surprise?

The story of the Princeton mile is a strange one—full of surprises—and 1936 race, in the light of the so-called upsets attending the last winter races at the mile, promises to be another one of those sensational developments of track history.

The top-ranked trio composed of Venzke, Cunningham and Bonthron have done plenty to popularize the mile and to keep it in the forefront of the track parade these last few years.

Venzke, for the first time, finds himself in the unfamiliar position of favorite in this young classic of the cinder paths, the principal reasons being that he trimmed Cunningham in every real test on the last winter program with new-found speed and that Bonthron has been out of competition a full year.

The Pennsylvanian, faster than he ever was as the "boy" wonder of 1932, set the indoor 1500-meter mark down to 3:49.9 on the 1936 winter boards and was the sensation of the season. Cunningham beat him only once in a farcical slow mile in which they practically walked, each refusing to take the lead.

Lost to Lovelock.

Bonthron's last appearance in competition was in the 1935 Princeton meet, when he ran second—with Cunningham third—to Jack Lovelock of New Zealand and England. The 1935 race, with its surprising result, was slow compared to Cunningham's record mile, but the experts agreed that the Anzac ace could have beaten his rivals and gotten down closer to Cunningham's mark if they had pushed him. In other words, Lovelock could have beaten the Americans, going away, at any pace.

While Cunningham and Venzke were pounding the boards, and the Olympic coaches were worrying over their strenuous winter work, Bonthron was training quietly, remaining out of competition and pointing for this one race—and a shot at the Olympic team, no doubt.

It's impossible to get a good line on what Bonthron's comeback attempt may amount to after a year devoted to accountancy in New York, marriage, and routine running practice. Bonny carried on a great racing feud with Cuningham in 1934. Glenn beat Bill on his home cinders, but by the time the year was out, Bonny had beaten Cunningham three times and lost to him only twice. Each drove the other to a world record, Cunningham getting the mile mark and Bonny the 1500-meter.

Now they both look on Venzke as the man to beat.

Jacobs Always Looks Out for Schmeling

Napanoch, N. Y., June 9 (AP).—Joe Jacobs, whose first idea for seeing that his fighter, Max Schmeling, didn't get the worst of it in his scrap with Joe Louis a week from Thursday was to raise a hullabaloo about "sneak" punches, has come up with another suggestion.

Jacobs wants the New York state athletic commission to adopt the international boxing union custom of bandaging the fighters' hands after they have entered the ring. Union officials seal the bandages in a box at the weighing-in ceremony and don't break the seal until the men are in their corners. Without accusing anybody of anything, Joe says that ought to be tried at the Yankee Stadium June 18.

Schmeling was slated to resume serious work today with six or eight rounds of boxing after a day of rest and has given his sparring partners notice to expect the worst.

They Worry About Joe Too

Lakewood, N. J., June 9 (AP).—Since they don't seem to have anything else to make them wrinkle their brows, members of the Joe Louis board of strategy are beginning to wonder how about that game of golf.

Joe has been showing almost as much interest in his club swinging as in preparing to do battle with Max Schmeling in the last few days. After watching the nation's best players in the national open at Baltusrol a few days ago he's been trying to improve his 100 plus scores.

After a heavy week-end the Brown Bomber spent the afternoon on the links yesterday. The program called for some boxing today and another day of rest tomorrow before starting a final week of intensive drilling.

Yesterday's STARS

(By The Associated Press)

Joe Di Maggio, Yankees—Drove in five runs against Browns with homer, triple and single.

Alex Kampouris, Reds—His triple and two singles were responsible for three runs as Reds beat Giants.

Cy Blanton, Pirates—Went route for first time this season, holding Dodgers to seven hits.

Larry French, Pirates—Blanked Phillies with eight hits.

Pinkey Higgins, Athletics—Singled the run home in the tenth that defeated White Sox 5 to 4.

Joe Cronin, Red Sox and Bill Rogell, Tigers—Cronin accounted for three of Sox's six runs in first game with homer; Rogell cleared loaded sacks in second with double.

New Yorker was acquitted of drunk driving when he testified his horse knew as much about red and green lights as he did. Perhaps the way to solve our traffic problem is to train horses to drive our cars.—Saginaw Daily News.

Manero, New Champ, Trailing at Shawnee

Shawnee-on-Delaware, Pa., June 9 (AP).—Tony Manero, obviously tired from his blistering last-round dash to victory in the American open golf tournament last week-end, was almost out of the running today as a field of 53 top-flight performers swung into the final 36 holes of the Shawnee open.

Manero recovered much of his driving power in making 18 holes in 74 yesterday, two over par, but he still was shaky on the greens as he lagged 12 strokes behind Orville White, brilliant Chicago professional.

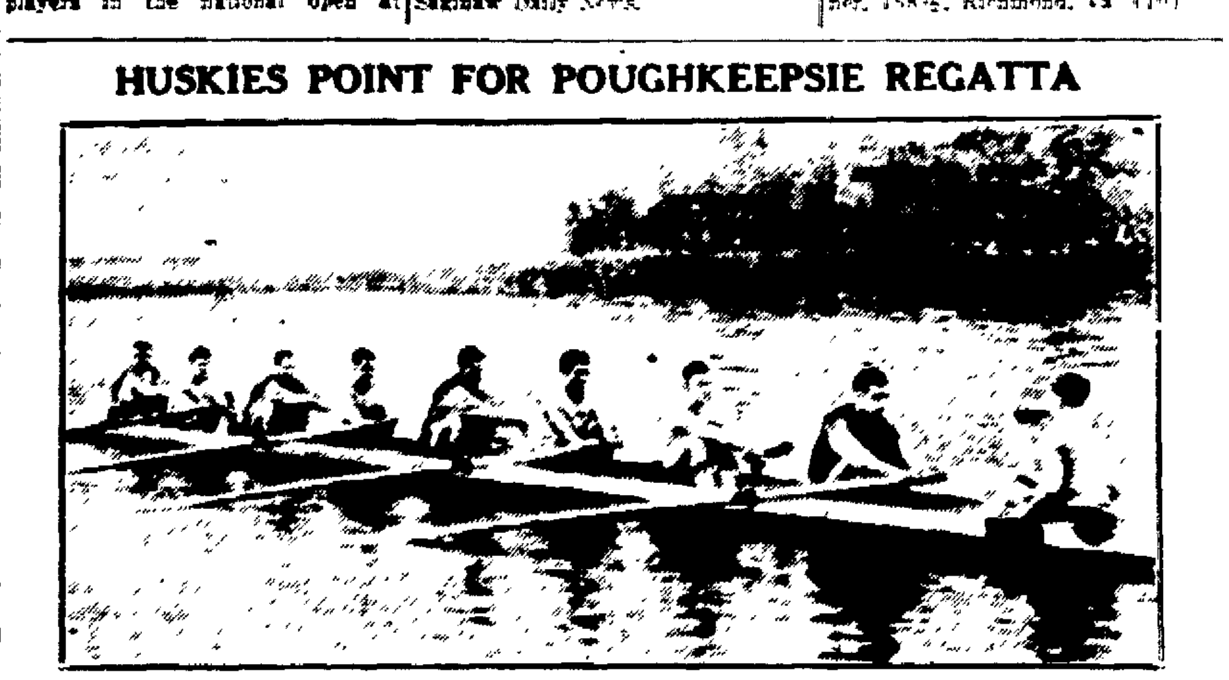

The national champion posted a 78-74-152, as against White's 71-69-140. White held a two-stroke advantage over Clarence Dozer, also from Chicago, with Byron Nelson, of Ridgewood, N. J., close by in third with 143.

Two others, Ralph Guildhal, of St. Louis, at 144, and Felix Serafin, of Scranton, 145, were within striking distance of the lead.

No less than 15 performers were under the 150 mark, and 11 yesterday equaled or bettered par on the difficult course.

A duplicate of his sensational score yesterday might easily send Serafin into the lead. The Scrantonian, listing seven under-par holes, rounded the 18 in 68, four strokes beneath "perfection" and pulling him up to fifth place.

Girl Is Found.

Chicago, June 9 (AP)—Dorothy Blumenshine, 14 year old elementary school graduate whose disappearance from her home in Washington, Ill., nine days ago caused a widespread search, was found in Chicago, the Daily Times said in a copyrighted story today. The girl was found coming out of a candy store on the southwest side by a reporter for the paper, the story said. Dorothy was quoted as saying she ran away from home "to go to work so she could buy pretty clothes and see the city's bright lights." She said she had obtained a job doing housework and was about to start work today.

"Lost foreign trade of the United States would have paid the Federal relief bill," says a headline in the United States News. That's a startling statement—but figures prove it.

Architects Present Pleas for Plans on School at Highland

Highland, June 9—With the prospect of an addition to the present school building the president of the school board and members are besieged by architects clamoring for the chance to erect the new building. A Mr. Barnes representing Adolph Knappe of New York was present at the June meeting held Friday evening in the school building. He was more than insistent on being given permission to put in an application for a PWA grant of from $160,000 to $200,000. He cited several other communities which were having new school buildings erected from government allocations and insisted that as taxpayers here are helping pay for other community buildings they should have their school addition erected in the same manner. He quoted the state authorities as approving of such measures and felt that the community had a gift of thousands of dollars in such a way. The members of the Board went into executive consultation for a few minutes and on their return the president, Mrs Rose, said their decision was that they could do nothing until after the annual meeting on July 7 when the voters would decide whether an addition should be erected. Mr Barnes was emphatic in his assertion that it made no difference whether he had the contract to draw plans and supervise the building, but to permit him to file an application. He retired after the decision but it was apparent that he was disappointed at the result.

John P. Whittley was present at the meeting in the interests of the low ground and water standing forming a bog on land adjoining the P.-T. A athletic field and in the rear of the Elms. He stated that a ditch had been dug several years ago but that it was partially filled in now and he proposed to purchase the tile if the district would provide the labor to deepen the ditch and thus drain the land. The water is carried off some distance where it enters a brook. As it is at present it is detrimental to the athletic field. He estimated that 100 feet of tile and two or three days of labor was all that was necessary and he was assured of the cooperation of the Board to drain the ground. Mr. Whittley had a grievance in as much as baseballs had been thrown in recent baseball practices and windows broken in a house he owns. William H. Maynard, of the grounds committee promised that he would look into the matter and also stated that Sunday morning practice had been so noisy that worshippers in St Augustine's church had had to call upon him to stop the players, since it interfered with their services.

Principal Herbert Campbell asked that a trophy be purchased for the hand ball victor in Miss Elizabeth Young's department. This was at a cost of $1.95. He also asked for new dark shades to be used in the grade taught by Mrs. Ernest Tamney. These are needed when lantern slides are shown. Other grades needed new window shades, eight in Mrs Fred Boyce's room; 12 in Mrs. Clarence Tompkins' room; six in Miss Dorothy Churchill's room and two at Elting's corner. It was moved that the principal procure them. A communication had been received from E. C. Elmore of New Paltz regarding the caps and gowns necessary at commencement. The use of grey ones cost $1.75 and $1.50 for black. The grey are used for the young people and caps rented for the faculty use. It was stated that 44 would be necessary. Papers for achievement tests were asked for and Mr. Campbell was granted permission to procure them. The question of new flags, one for Vineyard avenue, one for Riverside and one for the inside use in the high school was left to the principal.

Mrs. Rose reported complaints coming of a bus driver that had been taken off at a meeting two months ago, having been driving on the Wilklow's corner route. A letter had been sent to the Diamond D on May 29, and no reply received. Since contract conditions are made by the state department it is specified that drivers must be satisfactory or the contract broken. The company was to be notified that unless the driver was replaced on Monday the school trustees would have another bus and driver ready.

It was decided to replace the broken typewriter by a new Woodstock machine and use the balance of machines another year, before they were replaced. The athletic department asked for immediate purchase of supplies to the amount of $316.05. The committee was authorized to make the necessary purchases. C. Imbrie Richards reported that the water from the well at the Vineyard avenue school had been analyzed and found pure but that there was such an offensive odor that it could not be used. It was a driven well. He was given power to have D. H. Kurtz draw the piping and see if there was anything wrong in pipe or pump. In the matter of purchase of paper towels, toilet paper and Dixie cups quotations from local dealers with samples of towels were on hand and two of the trustees left with cleaner hands after repeated washings and wipings in testing the towels. It was finally decided to repeat the orders of last year. There are 80 cases of towels used a year.

It was expected that the budget for next year would be taken up but so much time had been taken up in other subjects that a special meeting was called for Tuesday evening. The clerk, A. W. Lent, had a tentative list for the coming year and last year's budget for comparison distributed to those present. The prospect is that it will be less for the coming year by $18,723.71 than last year.

A letter had been received asking if the rooms in Highland Inn were to be used for school purposes next year as the writer wanted to obtain a liquor license in that neighborhood. The trustees hope to be able to lease the building for the coming year with the expectation that another grade will be placed there. A. W. Lent was appointed a committee to see W. R. Seaman relative to renewing the lease for the building. The clerk was given authority to advertise the annual meeting for July 7.
